Carl G. Klehm

Klehm is dead at 57

Obituary on Page 9
by KURT BAER

Carl G. Klehm, well-known operator of the Charles Klehm & Son Nursery in Arlington Heights, died yesterday of what was described as natural causes.

Klehm, 57, was pronounced dead on arrival at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village at 10:30 a.m. yesterday. He reportedly died earlier in the morning of an apparent heart attack at his family home near the intersection of Arlington Heights Road and the Northwest Tollway.

Most recently, Klehm had been involved with the proposed development of a $65 million convention center near the Tollway interchange. However, the Klehm family name has been known in the Northwest Suburbs for 120 years.

CARL KLEHM assumed ownership of the nursery at Algonquin and Arlington Heights roads in 1957 after the death of his father, Charles. Founded in 1856 by John Klehm, a German emigrant, the nursery is known as one of the largest and most successful in the area.

The nursery is particularly famous for its wide variety of peonies. The family also operates nurseries on Rand Road in Lake Zurich and in Rockford.

With the growth of the Northwest suburbs, the business has continued to grow and prosper. Although rumored to be a millionaire, Klehm worked actively in the nurturing and selling of his nursery stock.

He donated plantings for several park sites in Arlington Heights and provided $9,000 worth of free landscaping for the Arlington Heights Memorial Library.

KLEHM HAD recently negotiated a lease with the prospective developers of the Chicago-O'Hare International Trade Center for the use of 63 of the family's 110-acre home site near the southeast corner of the Tollway-Arlington Heights Road interchange.

Klehm's attorney said yesterday that the death would not affect that contractual arrangement or the family's plan to maintain its home on the northern 55 acres of the site.

Annexation of the entire parcel is Neptune's Den rec center scheduled to open Nov. 5

The Wheeling Park District's new recreation center, Neptune's Den, is nearly completed and is scheduled to open on Nov. 5.

The center, located on the second floor of the indoor swimming pool at 900 S. Elmhurst Road, is being designed for leisure recreation. A pool table, ping-pong table, air hockey game, television, stereo and lounge furniture have been purchased and will be available to all park district residents.

The second floor area was previously used by Wheeling High School. The park district took over the area when it was no longer needed by the school because of the opening of the new Buffalo Grove High School.

PARK BOARD MEMBERS have decided to open Neptune's Den on a limited basis for the first month of operation. A tentative schedule would have the center open from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. on weekdays for high school students. The center also would be open from 7-10 p.m. on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday for family use.

Recreation director Rich Haddock has suggested that Neptune's Den charge a membership fee for the teenagers using the center. He said a club set-up would allow the teens to feel a greater responsibility for maintaining Neptune's Den.

Park board members, however, said they preferred to see public reaction to the center before imposing any kind of fee schedule. They therefore said Neptune's Den will be open without cost during the first month of operation. After that the board will evaluate response to the center, and make any changes they feel necessary in either fees or scheduling.

In order to make the public aware of the new facility, the park district is planning an open house at Neptune's Den on Nov. 11. The open house will include free swimming in the indoor pool.

Wheeling Township not implicated in BGA kickback probe

A headline across front pages of Monday's editions of the Herald erroneously implied that Wheeling Township and Wheeling Township Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen were implicated in an investigation of kickbacks to government officials in various Illinois communities.

No charges or implications of impropriety concerning kickbacks were leveled at Olsen or other Wheeling Township officials or employees.

The Better Government Association investigation that prompted the public charges contends that township officials in numerous Illinois counties have been receiving kickbacks for buying supplies from certain chemical companies. The BGA did not implicate Olsen in this scheme, but said his office apparently had paid overblown prices for small amounts of penetrating oil. The Herald's story yesterday correctly reported the BGA's findings, but the headline on the story gave an opposite, and incorrect, impression.

Under provisions for township government in Illinois, offices such as those of the highway commissioner are separate authorities and not under the supervision of other township officers such as township supervisor, auditor or treasurer.

The Herald regrets the erroneous impression.

Building boom

Rapid growth of the village will be a mixture of blessings, curses

by LYNN ASINOF
A news analyst

Wheeling's current building boom is expected to result in a rapid population growth that will increase the need for municipal services and provide added revenue for the local government.

Village Mgr. George Passolt expects the village to gain an additional 10,000 people in the next 1 1/2 years. Wheeling officials now estimate the population at about 20,000 people.

Passolt based his estimate on a population projection that lists the number of people expected to live in the major Wheeling developments either under construction or in the planning stages. There are now at least 11 such developments in Wheeling which will substantially increase the village population.

These developments can be expected to add about 4,000 living units to the village.

WHEELING'S population doubled in the 10 years between 1960 and 1970. In 1960, there were 7,169 people in the village. In 1970, there were 14,799. According to Passolt's estimate, the population will double again by 1975.

Passolt said this rapid growth will bring both problems and benefits to the Wheeling community. Among the expected problems, the manager listed increased traffic and an increased burden on the fire, police and public works departments.

"There's no question that there will be increased activity in these areas," Passolt said. The village has been increasing its staff in these departments and does not expect any problem in meeting the increasing demands for service.

The manager said the biggest benefit to the village will come from an increased tax base, including property and sales tax. "The major benefits would be financial for the village," he said. "I Expect eleven new developments here

Here are some developments either under construction or proposed for Wheeling, along with locations and the number of persons each is expected to generate. They are:

- Tahoe Village, being developed by the Ben Pekin Corp. on Buffalo Grove Road between Dundee and Hintz roads, about 2,400 people.

- Chelsea Cave, being developed by Hollywood Builders on McHenry Road near Elmhurst Road, about 1,480.

- Lake of the Winds, being developed by Mesiter-Neiberg Co. Inc. between Cornell Avenue and Waterman Lane south of Hintz Road, about 696 persons.

think the labor market is also most important."

WITH THE INCREASED population, Wheeling can expect more industrial and commercial development. Passolt said new businesses will be attracted to the village because of the ready labor market, and the expected growth in the commercial area.

Although the development of new shopping centers is possible, Passolt said it is more likely that existing stores will expand. "The ones who are here now I think can look forward to new growth," he said. "I think we also might be able to attract some things we haven't been able to in the past."

Village officials hope with the new growth the village will also be able to attract a hospital and an indoor theatre.

- Shadow Bend, being developed by Northern Illinois Construction Co. on Milwaukee Avenue across from E. Strong Street, about 602 persons.

- Harmony Village, being developed by Harmony Builders on the east side of Wolf Road south of Hintz, about 886 persons.

- Foxboro Apartments, being developed by Di Com Corp. on the west side of Wolf Road south of Heritage Park, about 900 persons.

- Pinehill Condominiums, formerly VIP Condominiums, being developed by George Manda at 810 McHenry Rd., about 607 persons.

All of the projects, under construction or being planned for the village, are either apartment, townhouse or condominium developments. No single-family houses have been proposed in Wheeling for several years.

Passolt said new developments will create less demand for village services than single-family projects. For example, most of the streets in planned developments are not dedicated to the village, and therefore the village is not responsible for their maintenance.

PLANNED developments also provide various types of recreational facilities. Nonetheless, the Wheeling Park District is expecting an increased demand for park land and recreational programs as the village grows.

- Swan Lake, being developed by Pan American Realty Co. on Wheeling Road north of St. Alphonsus Catholic Church, about 1,258 persons.

- The Forums, being developed by Victor Smigel on Elmhurst Road north of Pleasant Run Drive, about 436 persons.

- The Wheeling-Bressler project, being developed by U. S. Home Corp. on McHenry Road between Cedar Run and Whippeltree Village, about 2,390 persons.

- Devoncourt Condominiums, third phase of Lakeside Villas being developed by Zale Construction Co. and Ferguson Development Corp. on Hintz Road, between 500 and 600 persons.

"I think one of the things will be really an all-out attempt to work with the developments, and if they do hire recreation people, to work with their needs as well," said Park Supt. Dave Phillips.

Phillips said the park district is hoping to develop a coordinated recreation program in Wheeling by taking the needs of these developments into consideration. He said the district is currently working with the Mallard Lake Apartments, and has had some success with the program.

"Right now, we're trying to work with the 20,000 people who are here," he said. "Naturally if there's going to be another 10,000 or 20,000 people, we're going to have to meet their needs." Phillips said this will eventually mean expanding the park district staff and facilities.

In this area, Phillips said the increased growth will help the park district by increasing its tax base. He noted that the district's assessed valuation increased substantially in the past year. In 1972, the valuation was $97,800,000, compared to $68,800,000 in 1971 and $66,500,000 the year before.

Phillips said that as Wheeling develops, the park district must make sure that there is adequate open space to provide for recreation needs in the future. He said there is already a lack of open space, noting that the problem increases with each development that is built.

PASSOLT THINKS Wheeling has been aided in its growth by long-range planning from the zoning board of appeals and plan commission. He said in recent years both boards have become more aggressive in investigating possible planning problems.

"I don't think we're going to have some of the problems we might have encountered 20 years ago," he said.

Passolt did not think it worthwhile to discuss whether such growth is good or bad. "You're going to grow anyway," he said, "because that seems to be the pattern."

Students here 'really concerned' about Nixon crisis

by JILL BETTNER

History is far from a dead subject in schools right now as students watch and discuss current events in the Nixon administration that are putting the American system of government to the test.

Presidential power, the mechanics of impeachment and the mandates of the U.S. Constitution are among topics being discussed in area schools in the wake of the series of top governmental shakeups.

Teachers say most students, particularly those in junior high and high school, appear to be fairly well informed on current political events, but unsure of their ramifications.

Instructors are replacing history textbooks with newspapers in discussing American government.

"This has been a great asset to social studies teachers," Norm Repplinger, division head for social science at Wheeling High School said yesterday. "Many times what we teach is too dry for students to be interested in, but they're really concerned about this."

THE IMPEACHMENT of Andrew Johnson and Thomas Jefferson's standoff with the U.S. Supreme Court have become popular topics of discussion as teachers attempt to put President Nixon's actions into perspective for students.

A special half-day schedule is planned tomorrow at Forest View High School to give teachers time to talk about the issues. At other schools, teachers are seizing on student interest to discuss politics.

"I'm kind of impressed with how much the kids know," said Paul Jordan, head of the social science and foreign language department at Buffalo Grove High School. "They seem to be much more interested in what's happening than kids were a few years back."

AT HERSEY High School in Arlington Heights, the issues are being discussed "up and down the halls," said Al Schmidt, social studies department chairman.

Student reactions are mixed to the latest governmental crisis this past weekend when President Nixon fired special prosecutor Archibald Cox and subsequently dismissed Deputy Atty. General William French Smith.

Most instructors feel the teenagers' opinions on the firings probably mirror those of their parents. This is especially true on the question of whether or not Nixon should be impeached for his refusal to turn over the White House tapes that may be relevant to the Watergate investigation.

AT SEVERAL area high schools, teachers report there is very little support for the President. Polls of student opinion conducted in classes ranged from a 50-50 split on the impeachment issue to the majority of those asked favoring the action.

Dan Fox, an instructor at Conant High School in Hoffman Estates said the events of last weekend caused a marked change in opinion on the impeachment question.

A few weeks ago, Fox said, only four or five of his students out of a class of about 30 favored impeachment of Nixon. Yesterday, 19 said they feel he should be ousted.

A change in student attitude was also apparent at Rolling Meadows High School.

Commenting on his interpretation of the feelings of his classmates there, senior Tom Sulla said he has seen more reaction to the firing of Cox than on any previous political issue discussed at school.

"More people were outwardly upset than they were before," Sulla said. "There's a feeling of disillusionment with the government now. I think there's more alienation than before."

CYNICISM WITH American politics in general is apparently spreading among many students.

Palatine High School social science department chairman, Larry Peterson, said some of his students are beginning to tune out when the subject comes up.

"Students who favor impeachment are very vocal about it and the others are very quiet," he said. "It's almost like they're pouting. They are angry it's being discussed and they're tired of hearing about it."

No only cynicism but real fear is evident in some students that the American form of government is no longer workable.

JOHN BARBINI, a teacher at Eisenhower Junior High School in Schaumburg, said students "are shaken, they show disbelief and they are questioning the whole system."

Whatever the outcome of present events, both students and teachers agree that it is exciting, if not awesome, to be watching history in the making.

As one boy at Lively Junior High School in Elk Grove put it, "Boy, is this the year for social studies."

Thompson declines county race

U.S. Atty. James Thompson Monday ruled out possible candidacy for the Cook County Board presidency next year.

But, Thompson will meet this week with Comr. Floyd Fullilove of Des Plaines, who heads the Republican Party slate-making committee, to discuss county candidates.

"I'm not interested in running on the county ticket in 1974," Thompson said during a press conference in the Dirksen Federal Building.

The U.S. attorney answered with a "no comment" when asked if he will run for mayor of Chicago in 1975.

Fullilove revealed a move by leading Republicans to draft Thompson as a candidate last weekend. "He's a very prominent, well-known Republican. He's the type of person that becomes an outstanding elected official," Fullilove said.

Thompson and Fullilove discussed the GOP county ticket late yesterday. "In effect, he said, 'don't hold your breath,'" Fullilove said.

"I want his advice on the political situation as he sees it," said Fullilove, who has been "cuddling and talking to a lot of people" as preparation for Nov. 3 and Nov. 10 slate-making sessions.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Park Ridge, announced last week that he will seek the GOP endorsement to run against board President George Dunne.

Fullilove also has talked to Mrs. Lucy Reum, a member of the Illinois racing board from Oak Park, Chicago Crime Commission director Peter Bensinger and former state Rep. George Burditt about candidacy.

'Mostly political'

Crane disavows impeachment talk

U. S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th, yesterday discounted mounting talk of impeachment proceedings against President Richard M. Nixon, but declared that impeachment could result from further conflict between Nixon and the federal judiciary.

Crane asserted that in his estimation the President has committed "no impeachable offense" by not acceding to the letter of a ruling by U. S. Appeals Court Judge John J. Sirica that he surrender tape recordings relating to the Watergate scandal. He said it is up to Sirica to determine whether the material which Nixon does submit to the court satisfied his ruling.

Should the matter go to the Supreme Court, however, and should the President resist an adverse ruling of the high court, Crane said he would be required to vote for impeachment "as a constitutionalist."

Crane said his reaction to the news that the President had fired Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox came as a total surprise.

"I thought it was a gag," he said.

HOWEVER, U. S. Atty. James Thompson said Cox's dismissal was not unexpected after the prosecutor's public statements criticizing the President's actions in the Watergate case.

"When you come out and make the type of statements that Cox did, you cannot be too surprised at the outcome," said Thompson.

Sentiment for impeachment mounted following the President's dismissal of Cox and the subsequent resignations of Atty. Gen. Elliot Richardson and his deputy, William French Smith.

But, Crane said, "All that is involved in that is the firing of an employee, and that is not impeachable."

CRANE SAID he believed that current talk of impeachment is "mostly political" and could only be justified by "stretching the definition of 'high crimes and misdemeanors,'" the only constitutional grounds specified for impeachment.

Crane said he thought practical considerations would forestall impeachment proceedings in the House of Representatives. He predicted that the uproar over Cox would delay the confirmation of Rep.

Gerald Ford, R-Michigan, as vice president.

With no Vice President to succeed Nixon, "the realization that (House Speaker) Carl Albert (D-Okla.) would accede to the Presidency" would discourage many votes for impeachment, he said.

Thompson declined to comment on the propriety of the President's action in firing Cox.

"As a presidential appointee, I feel it would be inappropriate to make any substantive comment at this time," he said.

Thompson said he deeply regretted the resignations of Richardson and Ruckelshaus.

"The loss of these two men is a sad thing," he added. Thompson said he has a great deal of respect for Acting Atty. Gen. Robert H. Bork, adding that he had studied under Bork in law school.

Workers at four newsprint mills vote to end strike

From Herald news services
Striking employees at four of five Canadian International Paper Co. mills last weekend approved general terms of a new contract.

The settlement will mark the end of one of the last major strikes in the labor-troubled eastern Canadian paper industry. Some 4,500 members of the United Paperworkers International Union had been on strike against the five CIP mills since July.

Although approving the general contract offer, strikers have returned to work at only one mill—at Trois Rivières, Que., which resumed full production this weekend. Resumption of operations at the other mills was delayed by "local issues" to be settled before strikers would return to work.

A COMPANY spokesman expressed hope that production would resume later this week at mills in Hawkesbury, Ont.; La Tuque, Que., and Gatineau, Que.

The fifth CIP mill, at Dalhousie, N.B., was still shut pending tally of a second vote by workers. They had rejected the offer in a preliminary vote but held a second, "final" this weekend.

A union spokesman declined to reveal details of the new contract but said the voting was "70 to 80 per cent in favor of acceptance" at each of the four mills where results were known.

Other sources, however, indicated the final offer made by CIP consisted of a 23 per cent increase over three years. This is similar to one the U.S. parent company, International Paper Co. of New York, reached in June with its American workers.

The union had demanded a CIP settlement that would match the two-year contracts of 85 per cent in each year reached earlier with other eastern Canadian paper firms.

CIP is eastern Canada's second largest newsprint producer, manufacturing about 1.2 million tons annually, of which 80 per cent is shipped to the U.S.

Canadian International Paper is sole supplier of newsprint for Paddock Publications. The 12-week strike created a severe paper shortage that compelled The Herald and many other U.S. daily newspapers to reduce the size of their editions and take emergency measures to conserve newsprint supplies.

Charles E. Hayes, Herald editor and publisher, said it would be at least two weeks after CIP mills resume full production before normal newsprint deliveries could be expected.

In service to Nixon: many called, many fallen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Less than a year into his second term, President Nixon has lost a vice president; two former cabinet members are under indictment; two top aides resigned; the White House staff has been reshuffled, and now his two brightest stars are gone.

More than a dozen persons connected with the White House or Nixon's re-election committee have pleaded guilty to criminal charges.

But the loss of Elliot L. Richardson and William D. Ruckelshaus, who resigned to maintain their principles, may be the heaviest for Nixon to bear. They were his stars, men with friends across the political spectrum, and Nixon had placed them in a variety of crucial jobs.

Richardson, since 1969, had served Nixon as undersecretary of state; secretary of health, education and welfare; secretary of defense, and, finally, at the height of the Watergate revelations, as attorney general. He had a reputation as Nixon's top troubleshooter.

Ruckelshaus, coming to Washington from Indiana after a defeat for the Senate, rose quickly in responsibility and stature. He was assistant attorney general, head of the Environmental Protection Agency, acting FBI director and finally second in command of the Justice Department.

Before the events of the past few days, the toll of men associated with Nixon — involving differing reasons — included the following:

The vice president — Spiro T. Agnew resigned Oct. 10 and pleaded guilty to one count of income tax evasion.

John Mitchell

The Justice Department — John N. Mitchell, Nixon's first attorney general and his campaign manager in 1968 and briefly in 1972, is under federal indictment in New York on charges of conspiracy and perjury. His successor, Richard G. Kleindienst, resigned April 30 at the peak of the Watergate revelations, citing his association with principals in the case.

The Commerce Department — Maurice H. Stans, Nixon's first commerce secretary and re-election finance chairman in 1972, is under indictment in New York in the same case as Mitchell.

The FBI-Acting Director L. Patrick Gray III's nomination to become permanent director was withdrawn in March after testimony at his confirmation hearings that he had provided records about the FBI's Watergate investigation to the White House. He resigned as acting director after it was reported he destroyed the contents of the White Transportation Department — Former undersecretary Egil "Bud" Krogh has pleaded innocent to charges of lying before the grand jury at the time he was head of the White House plumbers.

The White House — Former domestic affairs assistant John D. Ehrlichman was indicted by the Los Angeles County grand jury in con-

Colson have acknowledged they are target witnesses of the federal Watergate grand jury. Former counsel John W. Dean III, former communications deputy Jeb Stuart Magruder, and former special assistant Frederick C. LaRue have pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy in connection with the Watergate cover-up.

Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich., assistant GOP leader, has proposed a constitutional amendment to abandon permanently the election of vice presidents, and give Congress and the President joint power to select them. The amendment will be formally introduced when Congress reconvenes today.

UAW sets strike deadline at Ford

The United Auto Workers have set a 10 a.m. Friday strike deadline at Ford Motor Co., the nation's second largest automaker. The union and company then imposed a news blackout on their contract talks. Before the blackout, negotiators agreed there was ample time to avoid a production-crippling strike by 185,000 workers.

House OKs death penalty changes

The Illinois House has accepted changes Gov. Daniel Walker wanted in a death penalty bill and sent it to the Senate. The vote was 128 to 37 to okay the amendatory veto. The major changes give a three-judge panel the right to grant clemency if "compelling reasons" so dictate. The death penalty would be for killing policemen, firemen, prison guards, killing during hijacking, rape, robbery, kidnapping, arson or taking indecent liberties with a child.

County probation system hit in report

The Chicago Crime Commission has criticized the Cook County adult probation system and said too many felons were being allowed their freedom. The report said the probation department was understaffed and underpaid. It also reported there are 17,000 probationers on the streets who have been convicted of serious crimes — many of them for manslaughter, robbery and assault and battery.

Board of elections bill now law

The Illinois House completed a nearly total legislative rebuff of Gov. Daniel Walker by voting 150-4 to override his veto of a state board of elections bill. The bill now becomes law but could be challenged in court. The bill provides for a four-member state board of election (two Democrats, two Republicans) to administer state election laws.

Impeachment the foremost question as Congress returns to work today

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress will resume work today after a long three-day weekend and immediately confront growing sentiment for impeachment of President Nixon.

Speaker Carl Albert met with other House Democratic leaders Monday and was expected to recommend that the Judiciary Committee begin an inquiry to determine whether there are grounds to proceed with impeachment against the President.

Albert was expected to announce his recommendation for a Judiciary Committee inquiry when he holds a news conference at 10:45 a.m. today.

Committee chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., who sat in on the nearly three-hour leadership meeting, was expected to announce a short time later that the inquiry would start.

The Democratic leadership met to discuss how it would handle the expected introduction today of impeachment resolutions and other proposals for investigating Nixon's dismissal of special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox. Several House members, including anti-war Republican Rep. Paul J. McCloskey, said they plan to introduce impeachment resolutions.

Washington's turmoil—the high points

Current developments in the Washington turmoil:

- Congress returns to work today, with several impeachment-Nixon resolutions anticipated and Speaker of the House Carl Albert expected to recommend that the Judiciary Committee investigate whether there are grounds for impeachment.

- President Nixon spent the night at Camp David, Md., reportedly confident he could ride out the impeachment threat, and preparing for a nationwide speech later in the week.

urging Nixon to remove himself from office or be impeached.

Before announcing his recommendation for a Judiciary Committee inquiry, Albert was to meet this morning with Democratic majority leader Thomas I. O'Neill Jr. as well as outline the proposal to the 23-member Democratic Steering Committee.

Rep. John McFall, D-Calif., House Democratic whip, and Rep. James

- Acting Atty. Gen. Robert Bork officially named Assistant Atty. Gen. Henry Peterson to take over the Watergate case from fired special prosecutor Archibald Cox and press it "to a conclusion."

- The Senate Judiciary Committee agreed to a request from Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield to begin an investigation of Cox's dismissal Wednesday.

- Former Atty. Gen. Elliot Richardson scheduled a news conference for this morning to discuss his resignation.

- Nixon's lawyers were to give a statement today to U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica justifying Nixon's decision to ignore the court's order to turn over secret Watergate tapes and documents to Cox.

- Sirica, expected to get jurisdiction in the case back from the U.S. Court of Appeals today, was reported "disturbed" over the turn of events and studying the procedure for citing Nixon for contempt. He summoned the two Watergate federal grand juries for an announcement this morning.

Wright, D-Tex., deputy whip, said they believed Albert favors going ahead with confirmation hearings for Vice President-designate Gerald R. Ford but apparently in tandem with the impeachment inquiry.

A UPI survey of House members, who must initiate any impeachment proceedings, at this point shows 65 for impeachment, 50 against and 113 either undecided or noncommittal.

Despite cries of public outrage, President Nixon was said by his aides Monday to be confident he can ride out the renewed threats of impeachment. The President and Mrs. Nixon left Washington in mid-afternoon for an overnight stay at their Camp David, Md., retreat.

Two of the President's aides conceded that the calls and telegrams pouring into the White House in near record numbers were highly critical of Nixon's action abolishing the special Watergate prosecution team.

But they said this was expected, and they predicted the tide of public opinion would swing to the President's side. For this reason, they expected Nixon to wait a day or two before addressing the nation on television to explain his action.

Watergate forces regroup

by United Press International

The administration Monday returned prosecution of the Watergate case to Assistant Attorney General Henry E. Petersen.

Acting Attorney General Robert H. Bork, who finally fired special prosecutor Archibald Cox Saturday night after his two bosses would not, told reporters Petersen would have "direct charge of the Watergate case and all related matters."

Nixon fired Cox because the special prosecutor vowed to go forward with court attempts to obtain the tapes and other White House documents despite Nixon's orders not to do so. Presumably Petersen will not seek the tapes and documents.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield instructed the Senate Judiciary Committee to "review" Nixon's dismissal of Cox and the resignations of Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson and his deputy, William D. Ruckelshaus. The committee will meet in executive session Wednesday.

There were many calls Monday for Congress to select a special independent Watergate prosecutor.

Chesterfield Smith of Chicago, president of the American Bar Association, urged re-establishment of the special office, declaring that Nixon's rejection of a federal appeals court order was "an overt action to abort the established processes of justice" and "an intolerable assault upon the courts."

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., proposed legislation that would permit Congress to name its own special prosecutor, and Sen. Adlai Stevenson III, D-Ill., said he would introduce a bill to create a new independent prosecutor to be named by the U.S. District Court in Washington.

Chief U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica, who has presided over the Watergate case, summoned the two Watergate federal grand juries for an announcement Tuesday morning. He was reported to be "disturbed by the turn of events" in which Cox was fired and the two top Justice Department officials quit.

A source in a position to know said that Sirica had studied the procedure for citing Nixon for contempt of court for refusal to comply with a court order to turn over his secret Watergate tape recordings for judicial review. But the source emphasized Sirica would not take any step until the White House made a response.

The President's lawyers plan to go into federal court today with a written statement to Sirica, contending that the summary of Nixon's Watergate-related conversations will satisfy the judge's order to Nixon to turn tapes of the talks over to him for review.

Chief counsel Sam Dash said Monday he believed the entire Senate Watergate Committee would have to approve any agreement between President Nixon and Chairman Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., and Vice Chairman Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., over Nixon's tapes.

"Ervin and Baker do not speak for the committee," Dash said. "The committee has to vote on this. There is no agreement by the committee on this."

Dash also said the committee would follow through on its appeal to the U.S. Court of Appeals to obtain the tapes.

Meanwhile Sen. Ervin said his committee could not accept a summary of the contents of the tapes as proposed by Nixon.

"I have never agreed under any circumstances to receive summaries made by any man," said Ervin. "I would not receive a summary because a summary is another man's interpretation of the contents of the tapes. Any statement involving summaries was not part of the compromise. That's not what the President said to me. He never said anything like that."

Mideast faces uneasy truce

by United Press International

Israel and Egypt ordered their troops to cease firing at 11:30 a.m. CDT Monday under a U.S.-Soviet-arranged settlement, but hours afterward sporadic fighting went on both in the Golan Heights and the Sinai Desert.

Egyptian government sources said the truce on the Suez front began "to take hold" immediately after the order was given to cease-fire but that scattered shooting continued.

Fighting also was reported on the Syrian front with bitter hand-to-hand fighting early in the day when Israel said it forced the last Syrians out of the Golan Heights and captured 8,000 ft. Mt. Hermon dominating the plains leading to Damascus.

JORDAN SAID it was accepting the big power cease-fire "in place" but that its troops in Syria would follow the Syrian lead. Syria said only that its leadership was consulting with other Arab nations. Iraq and Libya rejected it outright. The Palestinian Liberation Organization, which has been waging guerrilla warfare, issued a statement in effect rejecting the truce.

The cease-fire resolution, adopted by the U.N. Security Council early Monday, was worked out by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev in Moscow — the first successful joint U.S.-Russian effort ever to halt a war.

Diplomatic sources in London said Monday that the driving force behind acceptance by Israel and Egypt was an agreement in principle by the U.S. and Russia not to renew their arms left to the Middle East combatants.

In a surprise move Monday, Kissinger flew from Moscow to Tel Aviv for a private five-hour meeting with Prime Minister Golda Meir and Israeli military leaders. He then left for London, presumably to confer with British Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home.

An oil expert at the European Common Market said Monday that the cease-fire would lead to an early end to the Arab cutback in oil production and embargo on shipments to the U.S. But officials of the Vienna-based Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries denied this and predicted continued restrictions.

Yonkers ready for GOP race

Friend Yonkers

FRIEND YONKERS, vice chairman of the Wheeling Township Regular Republican Organization, has announced his candidacy for the post of Wheeling Township Republican committeeman.

Yonkers, 48, will seek to succeed Committeeman Richard A. Cowen, who recently informed the Republican organization that he will not seek reelection in the March 19 primary.

Yonkers, an Arlington Heights resident for 17 years, has been an active member of the Republican organization since 1961. He began as a block worker and has served as precinct captain, area chairman and vice chairman in the organization, as well as carrying out assignments as membership chairman and chairman of various fund-raising events for the party.

He and his wife, Lorraine, live at 311 N. Patton Ave., Arlington Heights, with their two daughters.

Cowen, who succeeded State Rep. Eugene F. Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, as committeeman in 1969, announced last month that he would step aside as committeeman in the interest of encouraging new leadership in the party and to devote more time to his law practice and his family.

"As soon as dummy hit the table I saw the chance for a most unusual play. Give my partner exactly three diamonds and I could duck twice if declarer finessed twice. Then with the third finesse I would take my king and leave dummy's ace high and dry.

"Things started out perfectly. South won the heart lead and finessed a diamond. It worked! He returned to his hand with a club and repeated the successful diamond finesse. I was able to duck with confidence because my partner had played the deuce and then the trey of diamonds. He would have high-logged with an even number.

"Then my balloon exploded. South returned to his hand with a club and cashed two more cards in that suit. My partner discarded the nine of diamonds and

Scott's office to conduct collection agency hearings

Consumers who have been victims of harassment by collection agencies have been invited by Illinois Attorney General William J. Scott to tell their stories in public hearings. The hearings will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 30 and 31, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Room 1900 of the State of Illinois Building, 160 N. LaSalle St., Chicago.

Scott said his office has received "numerous complaints from consumers charging that collection agencies have engaged in harassing and unfair tactics."

He said consumers had reported receiving late-night phone calls from collection agencies in which violent and threatening language was used, and that agencies had threatened court proceedings and other measures, some of which, Scott said, they are "not permitted to use."

The purpose of the hearings will be to determine whether rules, regulations or legislation is necessary to regulate the practices of collection agencies, according to Scott's office.

The Federal Trade Commission has also held hearings during the past year, though none in Chicago, at which consumers have described harassing techniques of collection agencies. The FTC in 1965 issued guidelines which prohibit many of these practices, but which do not carry the force of law.

Consumers or members of the industry wishing to testify at the hearings are asked to notify Assistant Attorney General Maria Elden, 134 N. LaSalle, Room 204, Chicago. Anyone unable to appear in person may submit testimony in writing.

5 officials of Des Plaines firm indicted for mail fraud

by STEVE BROWN

Five officials of a Des Plaines inventors' assistance company were indicted yesterday on federal mail-fraud charges for their part in an alleged scheme bilking inventors out of more than $1 million since 1971.

U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson announced indictments yesterday, charging the five officials of Imperial Inventors International Inc. of 2250 E. Devon Ave., Des Plaines, with 15 counts of mail fraud each.

Terming the company's business practices a "ripoff," Thompson said the firm falsely told inventors their products had a 50-50 chance of being successfully marketed. He said about 3,000 inventors throughout the country have fallen victim to the scheme.

THOMPSON CREDITED The Herald and several other news organizations with providing information that led to the criminal charges.

training manager; Donald Lewis, and Donald McAllister as the perpetrators of the swindle. Brumler resides at 1300 Pima Ln., Mount Prospect. Roth and Wagner gave the Devon Avenue address. Lewis resides in Rockford and McAllister lives in Hillside.

McAllister also is president of Washington Patent Assistance Inc., an Imperial subsidiary, which was part of the total scheme, Thompson said.

Imperial officials were not available for comment yesterday. If convicted the men face a maximum sentence of 75 years in prison and a $15,000 fine each.

IN A HERALD investigative series published in January, a number of questionable business practices used by Imperial were disclosed.

The federal indictment marks the second major action against the company in the last six weeks. The Illinois Attorney General's Consumer Fraud Division charged the company with violating the state consumer fraud act and deceptive trade practice.

The indictments charge company officials falsely contended Imperial was in a position to develop and market inventions successfully because its facilities and the training and expertise of its staff.

The company officials also are accused of lying to customers by telling them they were being charged reduced fees because their inventions had merit and by contending Imperial made no profit on its evaluation fees.

The company also falsely claimed to have special license agreements with manufacturers and led to prospective customers by saying it had a "50-50" rate of success in marketing inventions, federal officials charged.

THE HERALD SERIES disclosed that the training program for new product evaluators amounted to nothing more than a week-long course in learning a sales pitch.

Inventors were asked to pay a fee, usually $125, for the evaluations. After the product received a positive evaluation, (more than 90 per cent of all products were given a chance of success). Imperial tried to get inventors to pay between $1,200 and $1,600 for additional services.

Thompson said the company also steered inventors to Washington Patent Assistance, urging them to seek a patent for their ideas. The company charged nearly $600 for this service.

DESPITE IMPERIAL'S contentions, investigators said the company has never successfully marketed an invention.

The indictment also notes Imperial falsely told clients that manufacturers had demonstrated an interest in their products, and that their inventions would be exhibited at a trade show. The indictment stated inventors were given "newsletters containing self-laudatory statements about Imperial."

The Herald disclosed that the company newsletter contended that Imperial successfully marketed several products. However persons who developed the products said Imperial had not performed satisfactorily and they were disappointed with the company.

The newsletter also touted the appointment of Vincent Borsattino as the firm's general counsel. The Herald revealed that Borsattino had never received a law degree nor had he been admitted to the bar to practice law.

Besides Imperial and the patent assistance firm, the indictment charges the company used Imperial Youth Achievement Association, Consolidated Surety, Crown Engineering, Imperial Distributors, Equitable Collection Agency, Craig Marshall and Associates Inc., Pic Enterprises and R and W Enterprises in the swindle. These companies are subsidiaries of Imperial.

THE INDICTMENT names another Imperial official Robert C. Pond as an indicted co-conspirator. Pond was accused of taking part in the scheme, but will become a prosecution witness, according to federal authorities.

In addition to the federal criminal charges and the Illinois suit, the company also is under investigation in Indiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Arlington Heights Park District Pres. Charles Cronin called Klehm "a great friend of the park district."

Klehm was a member of numerous professional associations, a director and chairman of the board of the Tollway-Arlington National Bank, a member of the Cook County Farm Bureau, the Arlington Heights Lions Club and Chamber of Commerce.

Vernon Twp. library cards ready Saturday

Vernon Township residents can register for new Vernon Library District library cards from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, at Adlai Stevenson High School.

Registration also will be Thursday, Nov. 1, from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. at Spargue School in Lincolnshire and Saturday, Nov. 3, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Long Grove Community House.

Although residents will be receiving their cards, they will have to use other area library services until new library district is staffed. With their new cards, however, residents will be able to use these services free of charge.

The North Suburban Library System began making money available to the new district last night. The NSLS board approved an advanced grant of $6,370 to be made available to the Vernon area committee immediately.

THE FUNDS HAVE been advanced in anticipation of Sec. of State Michael Howlett's signing of a full "Project Plus" grant, which includes the NSLS grant, to $70,000. A spokesman in Howlett's office said yesterday that the signing has been delayed at least 10 days because of a few questions state officials have concerning the new district.

The grant was originally scheduled to be signed late last week or early this week. The spokesman would not elaborate on the questions. Last week he said there was a 90 per cent chance of the grant being signed.

According to Justin Fishbein, chairman of the Vernon committee, "Most important of all is that with their library cards, area residents are entitled to a complete range of library services, which includes borrowing from the area NSLS libraries."

The area libraries available, residents living in Vernon Township, which encompasses Lake County, Buffalo Grove, includes the Wheeling Public Library which now services Cook County Buffalo Grove. Wheeling had offered a summer program for Vernon Township residents that proved successful, according to officials.

A REFERENDUM IS scheduled for next spring in which residents living in the Vernon Township portion of the village will have to decide between the two districts. An NSLS poll is expected in January or early February for the same reason.

Residents may begin using the neighboring facilities as soon as they receive their cards on Saturday. Other area libraries serving the Vernon area include: Cook Memorial, in Libertyville, Elia Area Library in Lake Zurich and the Barrington Library.

The complete range of services offered by all 34 member libraries in the NSLS system will be available to residents.

When the Vernon district begins service it will have one stationary set-up in a classroom at Stevenson High School, and a book mobile that will travel to various schools in the township area. No dates have been set for the beginning of these programs.

The Wheeling High School marching band won first place in the parade competition at the University of Illinois Marching Band contest this weekend.

The band was named "Grand Champion of Parade" in the contest for the third year in a row. Also for the third year in a row, the Color Guard and Flag Corps placed first in the parade division.

The Hersey High School band won a first division rating in the field competition but did not place for trophies. The Hersey band did not compete in the marching contest.

Mr. Average: Nixon hiding something

President Nixon must have "something to hide" in the Watergate tapes he has refused to release, but the President should not be impeached, according to Mr. Average American, Richard Johnson.

Johnson, the Rolling Meadows man selected last year by computers as representative of the average American, said yesterday Mr. Nixon's firing of special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox and Deputy Atty. Gen. William French Smith and the resignation of Atty. Gen. Elliot Richardson during the weekend indicate the tapes must reveal information the President cannot afford to have made public.

MR. NIXON ordered Cox fired rather than abide by a court order to relinquish the tape recordings of White House conversations bearing on the Watergate matter to the special prosecutor. Richardson resigned because of the firing and Ruckelshaus was dismissed when he refused to fire Cox.

"To me it seems that there really must be something in those tapes that he (the President) wants to hide," Johnson said. "First he appoints someone to do a job and then when he gets close to something, he's fired."

"But I hope for his sake he is not impeached," Johnson added. "I wouldn't want to see any president impeached. That's a very drastic action and I hope for his sake it doesn't come to that."

Johnson's opinions on national, and particularly presidential affairs, have become public interest ever since he was selected as the subject of two television documentaries by the National Public Affairs Center for Television in Washington, one dealing with the pressures of inflation on an average family, and the other a first-hand look at the presidential campaign from the eyes of a typical American.

After spending one week with the George McGovern presidential campaign last year, Johnson revealed after the election that he had voted for President Nixon, the first Republican presidential candidate to win Johnson's vote in 20 years.

BUT FOLLOWING the Watergate revelations earlier this year, Johnson declared he would not have voted in the election had he known of the illegal campaign activities beforehand.

"I don't know if he's that confident that Congress won't start impeachment proceedings against him," Johnson said of the President. "But once someone starts the ball rolling, that's all it takes."

"I just can't fathom what could be in those tapes that would cause him to do this," he said of the weekend firings. "There must be something very valuable in those tapes that he doesn't want disclosed."

"HERE IS a situation where a top man gets something started toward uncovering this matter and then he is fired. He (Mr. Nixon) must feel he has some spe-

Wheeling Road open, has turn signals

The Wheeling Road extension was opened by Wheeling officials this past weekend, after a week's delay because left-turn signals were required by the state.

Temporary signals with left-turn lights have been installed and will be replaced with permanent traffic lights later this year.

The new road will provide motorists with an additional north-south route through the village. The extension connects with McHenry Road at the intersection of Dundee Road.

Bike rider, 7, hurt in crash

A 7-year-old Chicago girl remained in good condition yesterday at Northwest Community Hospital, after she was struck by a car Sunday in Wheeling.

Police said Marie McSharry was struck by a car operated by Peter J. Schmidt, 20, of 601 Merle Ln., Wheeling. The girl was riding a bicycle when the afternoon accident occurred on E. Norman Lane, near Marion Court.

Schmidt, police said, was charged with failure to yield right-of-way to a pedestrian and was given a Nov. 20 court date in Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

TRAVEL LORE

by Clare Wright, TRAVEL EDITOR

When travel agents jet away on their own they appreciate a good bargain as much as you and I.

Since several thousand of them are flocking to Acapulco for their annual ASTA convention this month, it's apparent they must consider Mexico a good travel buy — just as we do.

With no devaluation problems or excessive inflation, a pocketful of pesos buys a generous share of vacation fun in that sunny spot south of the border.

We regard the country as such a great travel bargain we're staging a big Mexican celebration next month — along with Northwest suburban travel agents, Eastman Kodak, American Airlines, the Mexican National Tourist Council, and other organizations with a special interest in travel to the colorful tourist mecca.

CIRCLE THE date, Sunday, Nov. 18, on your calendar. That's the day you can go to Rolling Meadows High School gym at 2 p.m. or 7 p.m. and view a close-up look at Mexico and its people in a new, wide-screen, full-color travel extravaganza from Eastman Kodak Company, "Mexico — A Photo Adventure."

You will also pick up first hand facts and lots of free folders about traveling south of the border — and maybe even win a free trip to Mexico for two, or some of the other attractive door prizes we're offering.

If you attended our Kodak show, "South Pacific — Picture Paradise" a year ago last spring, you already know how exciting a multi-media travel show can be.

We saw "Mexico — A Photo Adventure" at the ASTA convention in Las Vegas last fall. It's as colorful as a Mexican fiesta, awesome as the Teotihuacan pyramids and fascinating as a native Indian market.

Except for actually traveling to a place and seeing it first-hand, a giant-screen, stereophonic spectacular like this Kodak

Show is one of the best ways I know to experience the moods and cultures of another country.

JACK ENGLENT at Kodak tells us their photographers spent eight weeks searching through Mexico for the treasure of beauty they would bring home — in pictures.

We doubt there's much they've missed. In night-lit Aztec ruins, they photographed monuments of an ancient civilization. Their pictures of white haciendas, archways and aqueducts recall the colonial period of the conquistadores.

People — child and charro, craftsman and cook — are featured as the show delves into the character of contemporary Mexico.

Shopping in Mexico is also covered with vivid shots — at rural native markets, the famous "Thieves' Market" in Mexico City, and in mod Pink Zone boutiques. A comical look at the burro, bargaining at its best, and tortilla making are special sidelights of this shopper's tour.

The vacation fun of Mexico comes alive in a glimpse of Acapulco, where the accent is on sport's excitement and seaside romance. There are some thrilling shots of parasailing (the parachutists' answer to waterskiing), scuba diving, and deep sea fishing.

FREE TICKETS for our Mexico show (which entitle you to an opportunity to win the free trip to Mexico for two or any of the other door prizes) are available in the offices of Northwest suburban travel agents and all Herakl newspaper offices.

They're on a first-come, first-served basis, so we suggest you pick yours up right away.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: The dreadful rise in prices and the recent beef shortage finally sold my husband on the freezer idea. I love the convenience of being able to cook ahead, not having to run to the store so often, even having an extra bag of ice cubes on hand. What's half worry-meat is the ever present danger of brown-outs and the power going off. Are there precautions I ought to know? — Laurie Lubow

Just for peace of mind check the neighborhood for a place that has dry ice on hand — weekends and holidays as well as daily. You see, a full freezer stays cold a long time and with dry ice you wouldn't have a thing to worry about. Certainly, if you had a big power failure for a long spell it would be necessary to wrap everything and take it to a locker plant. Just remember that you can re-freeze meat that still contains ice crystals or is still cold. But, really, you ought to relax and enjoy the new freezer. Most power failures are short range, there is very little that goes wrong with these boxes — and you'll find yourself many dollars ahead at the end of each year.

Dear Dorothy: Because our boys pick out of shoes so fast, I've been buying one pair for each of ours at a time — meaning they are worn for play as well as dress. Do you have any simple way to clean up the scuffed shoes for special days? — Anne Monroe

Apply paste polish as you usually do and buff. Then spray lightly with furniture polish and buff again. A spray a day and a buffing should keep the gloss for nearly a week.

Dear Dorothy: When you make pie crust, do you cut in the shortening with two knives? — Hannah Stuckley

What I use is a wire pie blender. Bought it when first married. Think it's made of tin and it probably cost a dime. It works perfectly.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 239, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

Palatine couple married 50 years

Mr. and Mrs. James Keane

James and Bridget Keane were neighbors in Galway, Ireland, when they first met more than 50 years ago and on Oct. 6 the Palatine couple celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with a mass in St. Theresa Church and a reception at Uncle Andy's Cow Palace.

Married Oct. 6, 1923, in Ireland, the couple moved to Chicago in 1926 where they raised their family of five daughters and one son. James retired in 1963 after 21 years as a gas company inspector. In 1961 they moved to 518 N. Brockway.

The children, Michael Keane and Mary Patton of Chicago, Barbara Helms, Cincinnati, Agnes Morrison, Milwaukee, Roseann Ryan, Lake Forest, and Helen Stephenson, Palatine, and most of their 21 grandchildren were all present for the anniversary celebration.

St. Olaf graduates marry

Their romance on the campus of St. Olaf College, Northfield, Minn., culminated in marriage Sept. 22 for Nancy Carol Peterson of Mount Prospect and John Severson of Inver Grove Heights, Minn. The couple just graduated from St. Olaf in May.

St. Mark Lutheran Church, Mount Prospect, was the setting for their 6:30 p.m. ceremony, after which the couple greeted 175 guests at a dinner reception at Hocking Green Country Club.

Nancy is the daughter of the Stanley Petersons of 615 S. See-Gwon, and John the son of the Raymond Seversons of Inver Grove Heights.

THE BRIDE chose her sister Cathy as maid of honor and Mrs. Holly Miller, Waukegan, Wis.; Janice Mount, Boston; and the groom's sister, Mary, as bridesmaids. John's brother, Dean, was his best man, and ushers included Mark and David Pieper of Inver Grove Heights; Craig Senn, Waseca, Minn.; Brad Stone, Munster, Ind.; and Steven Gold, Milwaukee.

An Ivory organza gown overlaid with Alencon lace on the bodice, long sleeves, hem and train was the bride's attire, along with a cathedral-length veil bordered with the same lace. Nancy's bouquet was of phalaenopsis, carnations, stephanotis and baby's breath.

HER ATTENDANTS wore bright green crepe gowns trimmed in ivory lace and carried colonial bouquets of yellow and gold roses and mums. They wore flowers in their hair to match.

After a brief honeymoon in Wisconsin, the couple are living in St. Paul, Minn., where the groom works for Univac.

Nancy attended Prospect High School before going to St. Olaf.

Mr. and Mrs. John Severson

Two ice creams, please!

A Dairy Queen in Nashville, Tenn., had some unusual customers Sept. 30. A Rolls Royce pulled up and the driver, dressed in black tie and tails, stepped up to the window for two ice cream cones. The cones were for the bride and groom, Patricia Willer and Thomas Glassman, who were being chauffeured to their wedding reception. Driver of the borrowed auto was one of their ushers.

Patricia, daughter of the Richard Willers, 1965 Woodcliff Lane, Palatine, and Tom, son of the Joel Glassmans, Nashville, are both graduates of Vanderbilt University in Nashville and they chose to be married in Nashville's Harpeth Presbyterian Church, the oldest church in the county.

Their dinner reception for 150 guests was held at The Lemon Tree, a historic home converted into a private club.

THE 6:30 P.M. wedding was both double ring and candlelight with Nanci Raybin, a college friend of the bride from Cleveland, Ohio, as maid of honor. Kathy Pinchot, Palatine; the groom's sister, Stacey, Kennelbunkport, Me.; and another college friend, Ann Allison, Memphis, Tenn., were bridesmaids. The girls were in maroon gowns with matching Juliet caps and veils.

Hal Davidson, Nashville, was best man, and ushers were Jeff Wolf, Nashville; Ron Vasilas, Washington, D.C.;

Mrs. Thomas Glassman and Larry Bradley, Cleveland.

Patricia and her bridegroom honeymooned for a month in Florence, Italy, London and Paris, and they are now residing in Nashville where Tom is a landscape architect with The Tree House. He received his degree in fine arts and philosophy and Patricia received hers in English.

Congress: move on Ford naming

The lengthening shadow cast by the actions of President Richard Nixon in the Watergate crisis does not obscure the fact that Gerald R. Ford of Michigan is apparently an adequate and acceptable candidate for the job of Vice President of the United States. The House and Senate should begin as soon as possible the task of conducting full and speedy hearings on his nomination.

Before last weekend's firings and resignations, the pace towards confirmation had been leisurely since Nixon named Ford at a White House ceremony. During the week of Oct. 29, Senate Rules Committee sessions have been scheduled on the confirmation, and a House committee was expected to follow suit with hearings.

Ford's name then was expected to go to both houses of Congress for majority approval. Now, with Congress enraged and threatening impeachment proceedings against Nixon, there's a strong possibility Ford's confirmation will be sidetracked. Nonetheless, if Nixon remains as President, Ford remains a good choice to serve as his Vice President.

The point that must not be forgotten, is that Congress is not merely filling a political post that requires routine action. Congress will be selecting the man who could become, in case of death or impeachment of Nixon, the 38th President of the United States. The emphasis, in approval of this man, must be the nature of the man, not that of the political situation around him.

Although we argue that the process should be speeded up — Carl Albert, as the Constitutionally designated temporary successor, would not be an adequate President — we encourage a full review of Ford's record.

Ford seems to be the man for the job, especially if one views him in terms of Nixon's criteria for the job. The criteria are strong leadership abilities, the ability to be confirmed quickly and a shared viewpoint with Nixon on the major issues.

Ford acquired a reputation as a hard worker during his 25 years as a Michigan Congressman. He's never been viewed as an idea man or an inspiration/speechmaker, but the rush of Congressman to support his confirmation as Vice President indicates his popularity.

Philosophically, his conservative views, especially on foreign policy and military preparedness, agree with Nixon's views. That compatibility made him Nixon's obvious choice, and he will not deviate from the Nixon line on major issues.

Most importantly for Nixon, Gerald Ford should improve liaison between the White House and Congress — an area where the White House has been noticeably weak. On balance he will not be as rhetorically powerful as Agnew, but he should be a stronger vice president, in terms of the job's difficult detail work.

In short, Ford appears to be an adequate caretaker vice president, but Congress must not abrogate its responsibilities to investigate speedily and thoroughly the candidate. Anything less than such a study denies the fundamental importance of Congress' role in filling the second most powerful office in the United States of America.

'Directions? Forget 'em'

Now that I've been driving for almost a year my purse is in worse shape than ever before, and, no, it is not full of parking and speeding tickets. I barely know how to park, much less speed, and there's hardly a cop around who gives tickets just for trying.

It's the directions on how to get somewhere that are cluttering my purse.

Friends and relatives in remote places — like not on my way to work or the supermarket, which are the only two routes I know by heart — are beginning to expect me to come visit them. Knowing that I get lost in my own house and have an infallibly wrong sense of direction, they all give me wonderfully detailed written instructions on how to get there.

Besides not knowing how to get from here to there without help, I have a lousy memory and just because I found my way to Alice's or Jane's or Cousin Margie's once doesn't mean I can do it again. So I have all their wonderfully detailed written instructions.

Forever.

In my purse.

And real close to my driver's license so that when that exciting day comes that I finally exceed the speed limit and a cop pulls me over and says, "Where do you think you're going lady lemme see your driver's license," I can show him the license and where I think I'm going in one motion.

There's only one thing wrong with all these directions. None of them identify my destination and it's like finding a piece of paper with a telephone number on it but no name to go with it.

For instance: The other night I turned up at Jane's house when it was Alice who was expecting me for dinner and Jane, of course, had just enough leftovers for the family, not including the cat.

I have also found myself in the service garage of my auto dealer when what I was aiming for was the post office.

And when my son and his wife left their apartment right across the street from where I worked and moved into the next county I didn't see their new house for three months. But I kept turning up at Alice's and Jane's and the post office for dinner.

Of course, I finally made it to their house. To get my car fixed.

I've also discovered that security personnel at airports take a dim view of passengers with purses full of mysterious maps and diagrams. But after noting that I followed verbal directions to the ladies room and ended up in the kitchen of the snack shop, they cleared me, no doubt deciding that even if I did parachute into a cornfield with a million dollars ransom, I'd never find my way out.

Yesterday I decided that I really must start learning my way around on my own — somebody told me to go to hell and I stood there, waiting for directions.

Washington window

'Quota' game seen ending

by ARNOLD R. SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON — Shibboleth: noun; a catchword, a slogan; from the Hebrew, a word used by the Gileadites to detect fleeing Ephraimites, who could not pronounce the "sh" sound.

Quota: noun, a catchword, a slogan from the Latin, a word used by Old Line Democrats to detect unrepentant McGovernites, who pronounced the word "guideline."

The Democrats, whose tribal feuds sometimes do seem to approach Biblical ferocity, now seem to have talked themselves out of the doctrinal struggle over the word "quota" that they talked themselves into in 1972.

The Democratic Delegate Selection Commission will be meeting Oct. 26-27 to consider new rules for choosing 1976 national convention delegates that outlaw the use of quotas.

To someone just arriving on the scene, this might seem strange because the Democrats never have required the use of quotas in the selection of convention delegates, and their 1972 rules writers specifically said they did not want them used.

But those delegate selection rules for the 1972 convention did require state Democratic parties to take "affirmative steps" to encourage representation of minority groups, women and young people "in reasonable relationship to their presence in the population."

Those who wrote the rules said that meant the state parties had to make real efforts to get the three groups into the convention in more than token numbers. But some Democrats took the rules to mean there had to be about 50 per cent women, 30 per cent people under age 30 and 12 per cent blacks on each delegation, and some were arbitrarily constructed that way.

This became a cause celebre, with anti-McGovern Democrats claiming they were jobbed out of convention seats by rules specifically written by the South Dakota senator to help his own cause. As might be expected, the Republicans quickly picked up the cry against "quotas" in selection of Democratic convention delegates.

So, in trying to reconstruct the party after the 1972 presidential election disaster, Democratic leaders took "elimination of quotas" to be one of their first tasks. They appointed the Delegate Selection Commission to do the job.

Since no one was in favor of quotas in the first place, the Commission's drafting committee had little problem writing language absolutely, completely and totally prohibiting them. The problem was what to do about representation of women, minority groups and youth, who taken together represent a majority of the U.S. population.

The committee's solution was to change "representation" to "participation" and "reasonable relationship" to "as indicated by" their presence in the Democratic electorate.

Only when dealing with shibboleths do such changes make a significant difference in human attitudes. The drafting committee, which had squabbled for weeks, ended with a unanimous vote of approval for the new rules although some members still spoke darkly of trying to "fool the party" and Democratic National Committee Chairman Robert S. Strauss hailed its work as "acceptable to all Democrats."

The fighting over quotas was really a fight for control of the Democratic Party. In drafting the new rules, both factions showed a willingness to compromise, and from that came an unspoken decision to drop the rules as an issue in the struggle for dominance.

The new rules still must be approved by the full Commission later this month and the Democratic National Committee next year. But the signs clearly point to the return of the word "quota" from exile in the land of Shibboleth.

Fence post letters to the editor

Herald reader attacks a Wheeling trustee

In his letter of September 21, Wheeling Herald Fence Post, Trustee William Hein chides certain Wheeling citizens who are interested enough in their village affairs to attend board meetings as observers. He accuses them of continuing the election campaign and acting like sore losers.

There is one statement in the letter which seems to explain a great deal about the apparent attitude of most of the board members toward the people of Wheeling. The statement reads: "Now let those people who were elected get on their tasks — the tasks they were elected for — that of setting policy, establishing ordinances and governing the people whom they represent."

As the word "trustee" implies, it is a position of trust. By majority vote the citizens of Wheeling elected these men and placed their trust in them to take care of the business of their village in the best possible manner with all the citizens' best interests in mind. Village trustees represent, but do not govern, the people. The people govern. The people have every right to know and question their board about how they are handling the trust placed in them. The people have every right, even a duty, to help set policy and to voice approval or disapproval in all matters, including establishing ordinances.

The trustees' "tasks" include listening to and considering what the people have to say, answering their questions and explaining the "why" of their individual votes on any matter under consideration. At present, there is only one trustee who is asking the citizens their opinions on issues which will be coming up for board consideration. He will use these opinions to help him in his voting on the issues. This is called accountability, another phase of public trust.

Another requirement which the people have every right to demand of their representatives is that of ethical behavior. Right now, Trustee Hein's ethics are under question. He says he serves "in a managerial capacity" in the Hein family-owned auto parts businesses. Each year the village of Wheeling does thousands of dollars worth of business with this firm almost exclusively, even though there are other auto parts businesses in town. Trustee Hein always, almost defiantly, votes "Yes" on these expenditures. No matter how you look at it, this gives the appearance of a conflict of interest. If this is not legally wrong, is it RIGHT? (Even ex-trustee Valenza abstained, for the record, on matters involving the sign business.)

There has to be some legal hair splitting to make these things look right. There are many things that are legal but are not ethical. Trustee Hein should take a long, honest look at himself in his present position. If he is honest with himself and with the trust placed on him by the citizens of Wheeling, he will resign his trusteeship on the village board. It's a matter of ethics.

Anti-Inflation Act sought

Have you had enough yet? As more and more Americans begin to understand that only government can cause inflation (the increase of the supply of money in circulation) the question is asked, what can we do to stop irresponsible government on the part of our elected representatives?

One step in the right direction would be for each person reading this letter to write to your Senators and Congressman and ask them to support the Helms-Byrd Emergency Anti-Inflation Act (S.2215).

Policeman applauded

I would like to tell your readers about someone they all know — a person referred to as the cop on the beat, the flat foot, the fuzz or sometimes even as the p.g. You know, the cop that is over paid and sits in the station with nothing to do but play penny ante poker or hides behind the tree with his radar to harass the local citizens? Well on October 13, about 6 p.m., he received a routine call, there had been an accident, a small boy, Robert Williams, age 4, had been hit by a car.

Well, of course, he didn't want to get involved. He was probably going off duty and he doesn't get paid for overtime. He might even have to go into court on his day off. But this cop did take the call — he called for an ambulance on the way. When he arrived on the scene and seeing how badly the small boy was hurt, this cop with nothing to do and so worried about being sued if he moved the boy and caused more damage (after all the ambulance only takes 20 or 30 minutes to get there) picked up small Robert, placed him in the police car with his mother, with red lights and siren going, rushed him to Sherman Hospital. This cop is so overpaid that he gave the mother a hand full of change to make all the phone calls she had to, and since he didn't care about what happened, he stayed with the boy and his mother until he had another call for help to answer.

Yes, I would publicly like to thank Officer Fred Ciccone, Badge No. 5, for the fast thinking that may have saved small Robert's life and if anyone else calls for help they can feel safe, if they are lucky enough to have Officer Ciccone answer their call.

The Doctor Says...by Dr. Lawrence Lamb

How to lose 20 pounds for surgery at age 77

A deteriorating hip socket makes walking painful, and I have been advised to keep off it. No replacement is recommended until 20 pounds are lost. This I've been unable to accomplish — possibly because of this inactivity.

Will you tell me please, in calories, how little I can eat safely? I'm in good health generally speaking, 77 years old, no hearing difficulty, thread a needle without glasses, and sleep well. I'm 5'9" and weigh 180 pounds.

It is difficult enough to lose weight on a sensible diet when you can be active. Also, any diet you use should be such as to keep your health in good shape for surgery.

Specifically, I don't think anyone should be on less than a 1,200-calorie diet, except under very careful medical supervision. At that level, if you are careful, you can get enough vitamins and minerals. You might be well off to take a daily vitamin tablet anyway if you restrict your diet to that level.

Then you will need to concern yourself with mostly the protein and mineral problems. You should include in your diet a quart of fortified skim milk a day to give you enough calcium, and it will also help out your protein intake.

If you are inactive you very likely don't use much more than 1,800 calories a day. That means on 1,200 calories a day you will be losing only 600 calories daily or just about the number of calories in one pound of fat for each week of the diet. It will take five months for you to lose your 20 pounds.

EXERCISE HELPS some, but an average 150 pound person only uses an additional 60 calories in walking a mile. So, it is a slow process. Nevertheless, if you can figure out a way to exercise while you are dieting it will help, and you will be in better shape for surgery when the time comes.

I don't know if you can swim or not, or if pools are available to you. Exercise in water is a good way to help people who cannot walk. Swimming uses a lot of calories. Even if you can't swim, some exercises in a pool will help. If there is a physiotherapy or physical medicine section in any of your nearby hospitals they could help you with such a program.

I don't know how limited you are, but if your doctor thinks you can sit on a stationary bicycle you can bicycle at home and help to exercise this way. What is left is a lot of less effective exercises using the arms and upper body. If you can develop the strength to do these for a relatively long period of time, they will help to burn calories.

The Automobile Salesman As A Counselor

Everyone needs to be able to define his job to know what he does and what his objectives are. I thought you might be interested in how salesmen at our firm think of their job.

First of all, we don't like the world sell. We believe people "buy," they are not sold anything. To say "sell," it seems to me at least, conveys the idea of getting people to do something. The modern view of the buying process teaches that people buy, and only when they buy do we "sell."

Second, our job as a "buyersman" (not "salesman") is to help people to buy what satisfies their needs. To that end we search for needs and help people to become aware of what they need.

Third, our principal method of helping people to buy is through the giving of information relevant to the need.

Fourth, what it adds up to is this: our salesmen are solution-centered, problem-solving counselors.

Fifth, having said they are helpers (that is what they do) what is their objective? Simply put, it is to satisfy what the customer needs.

I suppose it all sounds simple. It is simple to say but not easy to be. A "buyersman" who is a real counselor has studied hard to develop an attitude somewhat like that of the marriage counselor or similar to the bedside manner of the physician.

For some time now we at Ladendorff have been in the process of developing a whole sales force of people who really care about you. Try us. You'll see what we mean when we say our salesmen are professional "counselors."

Come on, pro football, wake up!

AS MOST pro football fans are aware, there has been a sudden public outcry this fall about the game needing rules changes because it has become boring, with field goals and defense dominant.

The only thing I can understand is why it has taken this long for the complaints to become widespread. The problem certainly isn't new. All of a sudden everyone is saying, "Hey, pro football is getting dull." That's like suddenly realizing that not all politicians are honest and our environment isn't as clean as it used to be.

I refuse to be accused of jumping on the bandwagon. Two years ago I proposed some rules changes that I felt would make the game more exciting.

I still feel these changes would help and that they are needed more than ever. First, everyone is starting to realize the problem now and it soon will hurt game receipts. If it hasn't already. Second, with the advent of the New World Football Association (if all those other new leagues in other sports have gotten off the ground, why not this one?) the National Football League will have competition.

And even if the new league doesn't have nearly as good talent, which of course it won't, it might be more exciting because they'll probably have the common sense to use two-point conversions, do something about all those drafted field goals, and put more imagination and offense into the game.

As far as that's concerned, college ball has for several years been more exciting than pro ball for the above reasons, even though the pure talent isn't comparable. However, I can't stick up for the college game as much as I used to because there are far too many mismatches and routs. Just two of countless examples every season came this past weekend when Notre Dame demolished Army 62-3 and Ohio State casually tossed aside Indiana 37-7. It was pathetic to read Indiana coach Lee Corso's quotes after the game saying how proud he was of how hard his team fought. Only they didn't win, Lee. They didn't even come within 30 points, Lee.

The NFL is much better balanced with far more close games and upsets (except when the Bears play a decent team) than the college version. If college ball had this ingredient, or the pros had more wide-open play, then we'd have something.

It's beginning to look like high school football is the best version, especially after a thrilling overtime tie-breaker like last weekend's Fremd win over arch-rival Palatine or Maine West's victory over Maine South earlier.

Getting back to the proposed rules changes...

Most of the complaints this year have rightly been about too many field goals in pro football. It is ridiculous to see some guy who never even has to even bump anybody, let alone get his shirt dirty, solely decide the outcome of a game. And that's been happening more and more often.

Therefore, let's allow just two points instead of three for a field goal, move the goal posts back 10 yards as in college and high school, and make a team that misses give up the ball on the line of scrimmage, not the 20.

Other changes I would love to see are allowing two-point conversions (with the option to kick for one), outlaw the zone defense, and try something different on offense, such as the triple option more often.

Two-point conversions have been used so many years in college and high school ball that there is no questioning the value of the rule and the excitement it can create. Sure, it puts coaches on the spot, forcing them to make tough decisions, but it means fewer tie games and everyone is for that.

It's incredible that the pros have gone this long without adopting this change. Nothing is more absurd than the automatic one-point kicks after every touchdown (unless it's all those field goals, when everyone stands around and watches the ball float lazily downfield).

If zone defenses were banned, as in pro basketball, we would again see long bombs completed once in a while, as it used to be. This is practically impossible now, unless you're throwing against the Bears' defense (I use the word loosely).

The one good thing happening in pro football is that more teams have started to use the triple option, thus opening up running games a little more. But very few use it because they don't want to risk losing their quarterback by injury. And even when it is used, it almost rules out the pass, which spectators want to see.

We must consider fans' enjoyment above all, because as in any big-time sport, they are the ones who pick up the tab and make it all possible.

The NFL had better wake up before it's too late.

by MIKE KLEIN

Bob Gullberg drilled home the winning goal with 2:32 remaining in the fifth overtime Friday night as Maine East defeated Niles West, 4-3, for the Central Suburban League title.

His kick, assisted by Charlie Selbergren, ended the game after 82.5 minutes. Regulation play lasts 60 minutes; Maine and Niles fought through four scoreless overtimes of five minutes apiece before Gullberg ended it.

Approximately 1,000 fans attended the Central Suburban title game, played at Glenbrook North.

"It was kind of a knuckleball thing," Maine head coach Bob Dollaske said of Gullberg's goal. "He hit it hard and it

Gullberg's heroics were made possible by Phil Ludkowski's free kick goal that tied the game at 3-all with just 16 seconds regulation time to play. Ludkowski was awarded his penalty kick from 30 yards away.

Niles West was first on the scoreboard when Gursch drove a kick beyond Maine goalie Chris Dickson at 5:25 of the first period. The score was 1-1 at halftime after East's Louie Massong struck at 6:30 of the second quarter.

Luis Zubillaga assisted on Massong's goal. He sent a backward heel pass to Massong who drilled the ball, left-footed, into the high left corner.

Highland Park nudges North in league action

Even when Maine North comes close, something goes wrong. It happened again last weekend when a touchdown in the final 30 seconds gave Highland Park a 14-6 win over the Norsemen.

Steve Nardini scored on a three-yard run to secure the win for John Scornavacca's Little Giants. It was his second touchdown, Nardini gave Highland Park an 8-0 third quarter lead when he caught a 25-yard scoring pass.

"Highland Park is a team very equal to us," said Maine's Lou Gartner. "Our kids knew it and it was a very equal game."

Neither school had scored or won in Central Suburban North division play before Saturday. Now, at least, they've both scored but only Highland Park has a win.

The Little Giants tied New Trier West for fourth place and 1-2 records in the CSL North. Maine is 0-3 and last.

Maine North's first 1973 conference points were scored during the third period when Dave Helton passed 13 yards to Tom Leonard. Helton's conversion pass try failed when Leonard was ruled out-of-bounds.

Maine had seven yards and Highland Park 60 yards total offense at halftime of a scoreless game. Maine's Doug Sanders missed a 30-yard field goal try during the third period.

Highland Park was first on the board, and led 8-0 after three periods, on Nardini's first score. Maine brought it to an 8-6 deficit when Leonard caught Helton's pass.

The touchdown play was set up by an odd pass from Helton to then quarterback George Armstrong. Helton lined up at tailback, took an Armstrong handoff and then passed to Armstrong downfield to the Highland Park 13.

The Norsemen had 147 yards total offense. Rushers were Mike Schumacher (39 yards), Rob Andropolis (33), Helton (18) and Leonard (6). Leonard caught two passes for 18 yards and Helton had 51 total yards passing. Highland Park gained 120 yards total offense.

Harper golfers deadlock for 3rd

The Harper Golf team, seeking to land runnerup honors behind runaway leader Lake County, soared to 342 strokes at the Skyway Conference Meet at Village Links golf course in Mundelein.

The uncharacteristically lofty total by the Hawks enabled Oakton to jump into third in the league meet standings one stroke ahead of Harper with 341. Mayfair finished second with 338 to perennial champion Lake County's 303. The title was the latter's fourth in succession.

Harper's runners 9th in invite Harper College's cross country team faced perhaps its toughest competition of the season Saturday in the DuPage Invitational, finishing ninth in a 19-team field.

Individually, ace Mike DeLaBruere led as always with ninth place out of more than 100 runners. He ran 20:33 for four miles, just two seconds off the course record, and received a watch for being one of the top 10.

Others for Harper were Tom Fath with 21:50 for 38th, John Jones with 21:56 for 42nd, Jim Simonik with 23:22 and John Bone with 24:25.

Teams from all over the Midwest entered, with Merramee of St. Louis winning, Haskell Institute of Kansas second and Lincolnland of Springfield third.

Preps begin state bids in districts

The first step in cross country's state playoff series takes place this afternoon when two district meets among many in the state will involve Herald area teams.

District 211 schools Palatine, Fremd, Conant and Schaumburg will run at Crystal Lake and all other Mid-Suburban League schools plus Moline West, East and North at Elk Grove's Busse Woods. The course is located south of Higgins Road (Route 72) and just east of Arlington Heights Road.

The top five teams and 10 individuals will advance to sectional competition at Fremd's Union Oil Grounds (Meacham & Golf Roads near Hoffman Estates) at 11 a.m. Saturday.

Bisons triumph to remain unbeaten

by KEITH REINHARD

Buffalo Grove built up a healthy three-touchdown lead and then warded off Fremd's late surge to win the battle of the jayvee undefeateds Saturday, 29-22.

John Arendall was the Bison offensive hero, pulling in seven passes and converting two into touchdown romps. The 160-pound halfback also broke off a long scoring run while figuring in nearly 200 yards worth of the Grove attack.

Each side had come into the contest with unblemished win-loss marks. The triumph left Grant Blaney's hosting eleven gripping a six-game winning streak in preparation for their showdown rivalry this coming Saturday against Wheeling.

The Vikings showed all the signs of fading fast when quarterback Pat Gavigan arrived on the scene to direct their offensive. The slender quarterback led one scoring march early in the fourth period, then tallied himself on a 32-yard dash, and was in the process of taking to the air in quest of a tying TD when time ran out.

Up until the final stanza, the Grove had things pretty much their way. It took the Bisons just two plays to score their first touchdown with Arendall taking first a 10-yard pass and then a 31-yard fling from Dave Smithern.

There was an interchange of punts after that with the Vikes fumbling away their catch and Brian Fisher recovering for the hosts. A subsequent seven-play drive was capped when Arendall skirted around left end and danced 32 yards down the sidelines for his second score.

Smithern converted his second kick and Buffalo Grove owned a 14-0 first quarter lead.

Gavigan made his initial appearance on the gridiron with halftime approaching. He promptly connected on a 36-yard TD pitch to Byron Fingers.

Jeff Overton then ran across the extra point to narrow the gap to 14-8.

The Bisons weren't finished for the half though. After the kickoff Smithern con-minutes to go," Maine's Dollaske said. "At least, that was the first time."

When Soskin hit a breakaway goal at 4:30 for a 3-2 Niles advantage, the Indians were in charge again, only to have Maine's Ludkowski tie the game even at 3-3 with 16 seconds to play.

Dollaske praised East goalie Dickson. "He was super. They had several breakaways that he came out on and did just a tremendous job," Dickson was credited with 30 blocked shots.

Others who started for Maine in the title game were fullbacks Bill Yedor, Brad Bold and Jeff Briars plus Mike Tietz and Dave Weisbecker.

For good measure, Maine came back on Saturday for its ninth straight win, 1-0 over LaGrange. Massong got the goal. East is 9-3 overall.

THE BEST IN Sports

A scoreless third quarter preceded a 2-1 Niles advantage at 9:58 of the last period when Steve Soskin scored the first of his two goals. East's Massong, on a Bruce Tietelbaum assist, tied the game with a high right corner goal at 5:21.

"I think Niles thought the ballgame was over when they went ahead with 10 needed once with Brian Schuster for a 43-yard gainer. On the next play Smithern zeroed in on his favorite target — Arendall — from 10 yards out to make it a 20-8 ball game.

On the extra point attempt BG faked a kick and holder Arendall raced right to flip a pass to George Bastable for the conversion. That upped the mid-game count to 22-8.

In the third quarter Fremd miscued another punt reception and Brian Schuster pounced on it for the home team. On the next play brother Barry Schuster plowed across from the 12 to make it 29-8.

The Vikes started one march late in the third period that ended 55 yards later in the fourth quarter with Rich Sharpe plunging over from the four. Later it was Gavigan tallying on the 32-yard run to wind up scoring.

Carl G. Klehm

Klehm is dead at 57

Obituary on Page 8
by KURT BAER

Carl G. Klehm, well-known operator of the Charles Klehm & Son Nursery in Arlington Heights, died yesterday of what was described as natural causes.

Klehm, 57, was pronounced dead on arrival at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village at 10:30 a.m. yesterday. He reportedly died earlier in the morning of an apparent heart attack at his family home near the intersection of Arlington Heights Road and the Northwest Tollway.

Most recently, Klehm had been involved with the proposed development of a $65 million convention center near the Tollway interchange. However, the Klehm family name has been known in the Northwest Suburbs for 120 years.

CARL KLEHM assumed ownership of the nursery at Algonquin and Arlington Heights roads in 1937 after the death of his father, Charles. Founded in 1856 by John Klehm, a German emigrant, the nursery is known as one of the largest and most successful in the area.

The nursery is particularly famous for its wide variety of peonies. The family also operates nurseries on Rand Road in Lake Zurich and in Rockford.

With the growth of the Northwest suburbs, the business has continued to grow and prosper. Although rumored to be a millionaire, Klehm worked actively in the nurturing and selling of his nursery stock.

He donated plantings for several park sites in Arlington Heights and provided $9,000 worth of free landscaping for the Arlington Heights Memorial Library.

KLEHM HAD recently negotiated a lease with the prospective developers of the Chicago-O'Hare International Trade Center for the use of 63 of the family's 110-acre home site near the southeast corner of the Tollway-Arlington Heights Road interchange.

Klehm's attorney said yesterday that the death would not affect that contractual arrangement or the family's plan to maintain its home on the northern 55 acres of the site.

For Vernon Township residents

Library signup Saturday

Vernon Township residents can register for new Vernon Library District library cards from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, at Adlai Stevenson High School.

Registration also will be Thursday, Nov. 1, from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. at Spargue School in Lincolnshire and Saturday, Nov. 3, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Long Grove Community House. Although residents will be receiving their cards, they will have to use other area library services until new library district is staffed. With their new cards, however, residents will be able to use these services free of charge.

The North Suburban Library System began making money available to the new district last night. The NSLS board approved an advanced grant of $6,370 to be made available to the Vernon area committee immediately.

THE FUNDS HAVE been advanced in anticipation of Sec. of State Michael Howlett's signing of a full "Project Plus" grant, which includes the NSLS grant, to $70,000. A spokesman in Howlett's office said yesterday that the signing has been delayed at least 10 days because of a few questions state officials have concerning the new district.

The grant was originally scheduled to be signed late last week or early this week. The spokesman would not elaborate on the questions. Last week he said there was a 90 per cent chance of the grant being signed.

According to Justin Fishbein, chairman of the Vernon committee, "Most important of all is that with their library cards, area residents are entitled to a complete range of library services, which includes borrowing from the area NSLS libraries."

The area libraries available, residents living in Vernon Township, which encompasses Lake County, Buffalo Grove, include the Wheeling Public Library which now services Cook County Buffalo Grove. Wheeling had offered a summer program for Vernon Township residents that proved successful, according to officials.

A REFERENDUM IS scheduled for next spring in which residents living in the Vernon Township portion of the village will have to decide between the two districts. An NSLS poll is expected in January or early February for the same reason.

Residents may begin using the neighboring facilities as soon as they receive their cards on Saturday. Other area libraries serving the Vernon area include: Cook Memorial, in Libertyville, Elia Area Library in Lake Zurich and the Barrington Library.

The complete range of services offered by all 34 member libraries in the NSLS system will be available to residents.

When the Vernon district begins service it will have one stationary set-up in a classroom at Stevenson High School, and a book mobile that will travel to various schools in the township area. No dates have been set for the beginning of these programs.

Wheeling Township not implicated in BGA kickback probe

A headline across front pages of Monday's editions of the Herald erroneously implied that Wheeling Township and Wheeling Township Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen were implicated in an investigation of kickbacks to government officials in various Illinois communities.

No charges or implications of impropriety concerning kickbacks were leveled at Olsen or other Wheeling Township officials or employees.

The Better Government Association investigation that prompted the public charges contends that township officials in numerous Illinois counties have been receiving kickbacks for buying supplies from certain chemical companies.

The BGA did not implicate Olsen in this scheme, but said his office apparently had paid overblown prices for small amounts of penetrating oil. The Herald's story yesterday correctly reported the BGA's findings, but the headline on the story gave an opposite, and incorrect, impression.

Under provisions for township government in Illinois, offices such as those of the highway commissioner are separate authorities and not under the supervision of other township officers such as township supervisor, auditor or treasurer.

The Herald regrets the erroneous impression.

Village wants huddle with schools on flood-relief area

by JOE FRANZ

Buffalo Grove officials plan to meet with School Dist. 21 to discuss construction of a swale at Booth Tarkington School that will help relieve flooding in the University Court area of Buffalo Grove.

The relief swale would be used at times when retention basins in the Tahoe development in Wheeling were unable to handle stormwater runoff from the Cambridge subdivision.

About two weeks ago several village officials said they doubted the retention areas in Tahoe would be adequate to handle water after a severe storm. Village Mgr. Daniel Larson said yesterday Dist. 21 officials have agreed to meet with the village to discuss the possibility of constructing the swale across school property. No date has been set for the meeting, he said.

IN THE event of a severe storm, when the Tahoe basins would be unable to handle the runoff, water that normally backs up into University Court would be diverted to the swale at the school, Larson said. The water, he said, would be diverted after it reached slightly higher than curb level. He added that this condition probably would occur only one or two times a year.

Village Engineer Arnold Seaberg said yesterday one of the retention basins at Tahoe is at a higher elevation than the University Court area. After a severe storm when the basin reaches its high water level, it would be virtually impossible for storm water to flow to it. This is because the water would have to flow uphill, he said.

One solution to this problem, according to Seaberg, would be to pump the water uphill to the basins when severe conditions exist. He said, however, it would be expensive to install pumps that could work fast enough to prevent flooding. If the pumps weren't fast enough to keep up with the runoff, there would be no purpose installing them, he said.

Ben Pekin, developer of Tahoe Village, recently said retention facilities in the development will be more than adequate to handle runoff from the project. The project will not compound flooding problems in the area, he said. "The problems they are having there (Cambridge) existed long before Tahoe was built," he added.

SEABERG SAID because the problems existed before Tahoe was built and because Tahoe's retention areas adequately handle runoff from the project, there might be little recourse for the village.

Some village officials have said because Tahoe is downstream from University Court, it must accept any water flowing to the area by law. Larson said the developers cannot dam or divert any water that would naturally flow through the area.

Seaberg, however, said because the area in question does not lie along a creek or other natural body of water, Tahoe might not be considered to be "downstream" from University Court.

SINCE 1968 the area around Tahoe and Cambridge has been involved in a law-

Students here 'really concerned' about Nixon crisis

by JILL BETTNER

History is far from a dead subject in schools right now as students watch and discuss current events in the Nixon administration that are putting the American system of government to the test.

Presidential power, the mechanics of impeachment and the mandates of the U.S. Constitution are among topics being discussed in area schools in the wake of the series of top governmental shakeups.

Teachers say most students, particularly those in junior high and high school, appear to be fairly well informed on current political events, but unsure of their ramifications.

Instructors are replacing history textbooks with newspapers in discussing American government.

"This has been a great asset to social studies teachers," Norm Reppinger, division head for social science at Wheeling High School said yesterday. "Many times what we teach is too dry for students to be interested in, but they're really concerned about this."

THE IMPEACHMENT of Andrew Johnson and Thomas Jefferson's standoff with the U.S. Supreme Court have become popular topics of discussion as teachers attempt to put President Nixon's actions into perspective for students.

A special half-day schedule is planned tomorrow at Forest View High School to give teachers time to talk about the issues. At other schools, teachers are seizing on student interest to discuss politics.

"I'm kind of impressed with how much the kids know," said Paul Jordan, head of the social science and foreign language department at Buffalo Grove High School. "They seem to be much more interested in what's happening than kids were a few years back."

AT HERSEY High School in Arlington Heights, the issues are being discussed "up and down the halls," said Al Schmidt, social studies department chairman.

Student reactions are mixed to the latest governmental crisis this past weekend when President Nixon fired special prosecutor Archibald Cox and subsequently dismissed Deputy Atty. General William French Smith.

Most instructors feel the teenagers' opinions on the firings probably mirror those of their parents. This is especially true on the question of whether or not Nixon should be impeached for his refusal to turn over the White House tapes that may be relevant to the Watergate investigation.

AT SEVERAL area high schools, teachers report there is very little support for the President. Polls of student opinion conducted in classes ranged from a 50-50 split on the impeachment issue to the majority of those asked favoring the action.

Dan Fox, an instructor at Conant High School in Hoffman Estates said the events of last weekend caused a marked change in opinion on the impeachment question.

A few weeks ago, Fox said, only four or five of his students out of a class of about 30 favored impeachment of Nixon. Yesterday, 19 said they feel he should be ousted.

A change in student attitude was also apparent at Rolling Meadows High School.

Commenting on his interpretation of the feelings of his classmates there, senior Tom Sulla said he has seen more reaction to the firing of Cox than on any previous political issue discussed at school.

"More people were outwardly upset than they were before," Sulla said. "There's a feeling of disillusionment with the government now. I think there's more alienation than before."

CYNICISM WITH American politics in general is apparently spreading among many students.

Palatine High School social science department chairman, Larry Peterson, said some of his students are beginning to tune out when the subject comes up.

"Students who favor impeachment are very vocal about it and the others are very quiet," he said. "It's almost like they're pouting. They are angry it's being discussed and they're tired of hearing about it."

No only cynicism but real fear is evident in some students that the American form of government is no longer workable.

JOHN BARBINI, a teacher at Eisenhower Junior High School in Schaumburg, said students "are shaken, they show disbelief and they are questioning the whole system."

Whatever the outcome of present events, both students and teachers agree that it is exciting, if not awesome, to be watching history in the making.

As one boy at Lively Junior High School in Elk Grove put it, "Boy, is this the year for social studies."

5 officials of Des Plaines firm indicted for mail fraud

by STEVE BROWN

Five officials of a Des Plaines inventors' assistance company were indicted yesterday on federal mail-fraud charges for their part in an alleged scheme bilking inventors out of more than $1 million since 1971.

U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson announced indictments yesterday, charging the five officials of Imperial Inventors International Inc., of 2250 E. Devon Ave., Des Plaines, with 15 counts of mail fraud each.

Terming the company's business practices a "ripoff," Thompson said the firm falsely told inventors their products had a 50-50 chance of being successfully marketed. He said about 3,000 inventors throughout the country have fallen victim to the scheme.

THOMPSON CREDITED The Herald and several other news organizations with providing information that led to the criminal charges.

The indictment names Thomas M. Roth, national coordinator; Clair C. Wagner, national codirector; Jack Brumley, training manager; Donald Lewis, and Donald McAllister as the perpetrators of the swindle. Brumley resides at 1300 Pima Ln., Mount Prospect. Roth and Wagner gave the Devon Avenue address. Lewis resides in Rockford and McAllister lives in Hillside.

McAllister also is president of Washington Patent Assistance Inc., an Imperial subsidiary, which was part of the total scheme, Thompson said.

Imperial officials were not available for comment yesterday. If convicted the men face a maximum sentence of 75 years in prison and a $15,000 fine each.

IN A HERALD investigative series published in January, a number of questionable business practices used by Imperial were disclosed.

The federal indictment marks the second major action against the company in the last six weeks. The Illinois Attorney General's Consumer Fraud Division charged the company with violating the state consumer fraud act and deceptive trade practices.

The indictments charge company officials falsely contended Imperial was in a position to develop and market inventions successfully because its facilities and the training and expertise of its staff.

The company officials also are accused of lying to customers by telling them they were being charged reduced fees because their inventions had merit and by contending Imperial made no profit on its evaluation fees.

The company also falsely claimed to have special license agreements with manufacturers and lied to prospective customers by saying it had a "50-50" rate of success in marketing inventions, federal officials charged.

THE HERALD SERIES disclosed that the training program for new product evaluators amounted to nothing more than a week-long course in learning a sales pitch.

Inventors were asked to pay a fee, usually $125, for the evaluations. After the product received a positive evaluation, (more than 90 per cent of all products were given a chance of success). Imperial tried to get inventors to pay between $1,200 and $1,600 for additional services.

Thompson said the company also steered inventors to Washington Patent Assistance, urging them to seek a patent for their ideas. The company charged nearly $600 for this service.

DESPITE IMPERIAL'S contentions, investigators said the company has never successfully marketed an invention.

The indictment also notes Imperial falsely told clients that manufacturers had demonstrated an interest in their products, and that their inventions would be exhibited at a trade show. The indictment stated inventors were given "newsletters containing self-laudatory statements about Imperial."

The Herald disclosed that the company newsletter contended that Imperial successfully marketed several products. However persons who developed the products said Imperial had not performed satisfactorily and they were disappointed with the company.

The newsletter also touted the appointment of Vincent Borsattino as the firm's general counsel. The Herald revealed that Borsattino had never received a law degree nor had he been admitted to the bar to practice law.

Besides Imperial and the patent assistance firm, the indictment charges the company used Imperial Youth Achievement Association, Consolidated Surety, Crown Engineering, Imperial Distributors, Equitable Collection Agency, Craig Marshall and Associates Inc., Pic Enterprises and R and W Enterprises in the swindle. These companies are subsidiaries of Imperial.

THE INDICTMENT names another Imperial official Robert C. Pond as an undicted co-conspirator. Pond was accused of taking part in the scheme, but will become a prosecution witness, according to federal authorities.

In addition to the federal criminal charges and the Illinois suit, the company also is under investigation in Indiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

now pending before the Arlington Heights village board.

Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh, who said he knew Klehm as a personal friend for more than 10 years, described him as being "foremost among the people we in the village will miss."

"IF THERE is a single person in my life who symbolizes this area, it is Carl Klehm," Walsh said, "because of his personality, his generosity and as an individual."

Arlington Heights Park District Pres. Charles Cronin called Klehm "a great friend of the park district."

Klehm was a member of numerous professional associations, a director and chairman of the board of the Tollway-Arlington National Bank, a member of the Cook County Farm Bureau, the Arlington Heights Lions Club and Chamber of Commerce.

Klehm is survived by his wife, Lois; three sons, Carl II, Arnold J. and Roy; a daughter, Kathleen; four grandchildren and five sisters.

Visitation is today from 7-9:30 p.m. at Lauterburg and Oehler Funeral Home, 2000 E. Northwest Hwy., and tomorrow from 2-5 p.m. and 7-9:30 p.m.

Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at St. Peter Lutheran Church, 111 W. Olive St., and burial will take place in Memory Gardens Cemetery.

Mr. Average: Nixon hiding something

President Nixon must have "something to hide" in the Watergate tapes he has refused to release, but the President should not be impeached, according to Mr. Average American, Richard Johnson.

Johnson, the Rolling Meadows man selected last year by computers as representative of the average American, said yesterday Mr. Nixon's firing of special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox and Deputy Atty. Gen. William French Smith and the resignation of Atty. Gen. Elliot Richardson during the weekend indicate the tapes must reveal information the President cannot afford to have made public.

MIL. NIXON ordered Cox fired rather than abide by a court order to relinquish the two recordings of White House conversations bearing on the Watergate matter to the special prosecutor. Richardson resigned because of the firing and Ruckelshaus was dismissed when he refused to fire Cox.

"To me it seems that there really must be something in those tapes that he (the President) wants to hide," Johnson said. "First he appoints someone to do a job and then when he gets close to something, he's fired."

"But I hope for his sake he is not impeached," Johnson added. "I wouldn't want to see any president impeached. That's a very drastic action and I hope for his sake it doesn't come to that."

Johnson's opinions on national, and particularly presidential affairs, have become public interest ever since he was selected as the subject of two television documentaries by the National Public Affairs Center for Television in Washington, one dealing with the pressures of inflation on an average family, and the other a first-hand look at the presidential campaign from the eyes of a typical American.

After spending one week with the George McGovern presidential campaign last year, Johnson revealed after the election that he had voted for President Nixon, the first Republican presidential candidate to win Johnson's vote in 20 years.

BUT FOLLOWING the Watergate revelations earlier this year, Johnson declared he would not have voted in the election had he known of the illegal campaign activities beforehand.

"I don't know if he's that confident that Congress won't start impeachment proceedings against him," Johnson said of the President. "But once someone starts the ball rolling, that's all it takes."

"I just can't fathom what could be in those tapes that would cause him to do this," he said of the weekend firings.

Youth, 17, booked on drug charge

A 17-year-old Buffalo Grove youth was arrested on drug charges Sunday by Mount Prospect police after he was stopped for driving with a faulty muffler.

Michael P. McCartney, 498 Lauren Ln., Buffalo Grove, was charged with possession of marijuana and the muffler violation. The arrest was made at Euclid Avenue and Basswood Lane. He will appear Dec. 14 in Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

A few hours earlier, a Chicago youth, Joseph E. Kole, 18, was arrested on similar charges, after his car was stopped at River and Foundry roads. Kole was charged with possession of marijuana, the muffler violation, failure to transfer vehicle title, having fictitious plates and having open liquor in a vehicle. He also will appear Dec. 14 in court.

Wheeling Road open, has turn signals

The Wheeling Road extension was opened by Wheeling officials this past weekend, after a week's delay because left-turn signals were required by the state.

Temporary signals with left-turn lights have been installed and will be replaced with permanent traffic lights later this year.

The new road will provide motorists with an additional north-south route through the village. The extension connects with McHenry Road at the intersection of Dundee Road.

Bike rider, 7, hurt in crash

A 7-year-old Chicago girl remained in good condition yesterday at Northwest Community Hospital, after she was struck by a car Sunday in Wheeling.

Police said Marie McSharry was struck by a car operated by Peter J. Schmidt, 29, of 601 Merle Ln., Wheeling. The girl was riding a bicycle when the afternoon accident occurred on E. Norman Lane, near Marion Court.

Schmidt, police said, was charged with failure to yield right-of-way to a pedestrian and was given a Nov. 20 court date in Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Smoking causes apartment fire

Residents of 845 Miller Ln. in Buffalo Grove's Mill Creek apartment development were forced to leave their apartments yesterday morning when fire broke out.

Assistant Buffalo Grove Fire Chief William Dettmer said the probable cause of the fire, which was restricted to a single apartment, was the careless use of smoking materials. There was no damage estimate available, although Dettmer said there was no structural damage to the building.

Michael Weeks, one of the two occupants of the apartment, told firemen he was sleeping on the couch when the fire woke him. Weeks reportedly said he saw his bed on fire and then woke the other resident, James Pibaro.

The fire alarm was sounded about 2:30 a.m. and it took two hours to put out the fire.

Wheeling band wins parade competition

The Wheeling High School marching band won first place in the parade competition at the University of Illinois Marching Band contest this weekend.

The band was named "Grand Champion of Parade" in the contest for the third year in a row. Also for the third year in a row, the Color Guard and Flag Corps placed first in the parade division.

Wheeling also won a second overall place in the field competition at the contest.

Gas line no hindrance to driver test station

A previously undetected gas line on property in Barrington Hills will not prevent the state from purchasing the 40-acre site for a Northwest suburban driver testing station.

Norbert Johnson, head of physical services with Sec. of State Michael J. Howlett, said yesterday that his earlier fears of the site's safety have been allayed.

"I've had a meeting with the National Gas Pipeline Corporation of America, There's no problem," Johnson said. The corporation will pay for upgrading the line and moving it if necessary, according to Johnson.

LESS THAN two weeks ago, Johnson told The Herald that he had received an extension on the state's option to buy the property when state engineers discovered the gas line.

Now, Johnson says all that remains before the state's option to buy the property when state engineers discovered the gas line.

Now, Johnson says all that remains before the state closes the deal to buy the site is to "get a few little technicalities straightened out."

Those details include talks with Howlett and an architect. Although Johnson has not formalized a building design for the station, he promised, "It's going to be acceptable to the community."

The physical services head met with area village attorneys shortly after the state took out an option, and he has reportedly agreed to meet with municipal officials after the state purchases the site.

The land has a reported purchase price of $112,000 and is located near Ill. Rte. 59 in southern Barrington Hills.

THE SITE HAD been eliminated from a group of three recommended sites submitted by a local search committee to Howlett, a Democrat, earlier this year. The committee members were selected by Republican Sec. of State John W. Lewis. Committee members claim that the site is too far from sewer and water lines to be economically feasible and has poor access from the Northwest Tollway.

State officials say those problems will be overcome.

The facility will cost an estimated $1.5 million when completed. It will include on-the-road testing lanes for the driving test. Current driver testing stations closest to Northwest suburban residents are in Lombard and Elgin.

Carl G. Klehm

Klehm is dead at 57

Obituary on Page 9
by KURT BAER

Carl G. Klehm, well-known operator of the Charles Klehm & Son Nursery in Arlington Heights, died yesterday of what was described as natural causes.

Klehm, 57, was pronounced dead on arrival at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village at 10:30 a.m. yesterday. He reportedly died earlier in the morning of an apparent heart attack at his family home near the intersection of Arlington Heights Road and the Northwest Tollway.

Most recently, Klehm had been involved with the proposed development of a $63 million convention center near the Tollway interchange. However, the Klehm family name has been known in the Northwest Suburbs for 120 years.

CARL KLEHM assumed ownership of the nursery at Algonquin and Arlington Heights roads in 1957 after the death of his father, Charles. Founded in 1836 by John Klehm, a German emigrant, the nursery is known as one of the largest and most successful in the area.

The nursery is particularly famous for its wide variety of peonies. The family also operates nurseries on Rand Road in Lake Zurich and in Rockford.

With the growth of the Northwest suburbs, the business has continued to grow and prosper. Although rumored to be a millionaire, Klehm worked actively in the nurturing and selling of his nursery stock.

He donated plantings for several park sites in Arlington Heights and provided $9,000 worth of free landscaping for the Arlington Heights Memorial Library.

KLEHM HAD recently negotiated a lease with the prospective developers of the Chicago-O'Hare International Trade Center for the use of 65 of the family's 110-acre home site near the southeast corner of the Tollway-Arlington Heights Road interchange.

Klehm's attorney said yesterday that the death would not affect that contractual arrangement or the family's plan to maintain its home on the northern 33 acres of the site.

'Bilked inventors of $1 million'

5 Imperial officials indicted for fraud

by STEVE BROWN

Five officials of a Des Plaines inventors' assistance company were indicted yesterday on federal mail-fraud charges for their part in an alleged scheme bilking inventors out of more than $1 million since 1971.

U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson announced indictments yesterday, charging the five officials of Imperial Inventors International Inc. of 2250 E. Devon Ave., Des Plaines, with 15 counts of mail fraud each.

Terming the company's business practices a "ripoff," Thompson said the firm falsely told inventors their products had a 50-50 chance of being successfully marketed. He said about 3,000 inventors throughout the country have fallen victim to the scheme.

THOMPSON CREDITED The Herald and several other news organizations with providing information that led to the criminal charges.

The indictment names Thomas M. Roth, national coordinator; Clair C. Wagner, national codirector; Jack Brumler, training manager; Donald Lewis, and Donald McAllister as the perpetrators of the swindle. Brumler resides at 1300 Pima Ln., Mount Prospect. Roth and Wagner gave the Devon Avenue address. Lewis resides in Rockford and McAllister lives in Hillside.

McAllister also is president of Washington Patent Assistance Inc., an Imperial subsidiary, which was part of the total scheme, Thompson said.

Imperial officials were not available for comment yesterday. If convicted the men face a maximum sentence of 75 years in prison and a $15,000 fine each.

IN A HERALD investigative series published in January, a number of questionable business practices used by Imperial were disclosed.

The federal indictment marks the second major action against the company in the last six weeks. The Illinois Attorney General's Consumer Fraud Division charged the company with violating the state consumer fraud act and deceptive trade practice.

The indictments charge company officials falsely contended Imperial was in a position to obtain and market inventions successfully because of its facilities and the training and expertise of its staff.

The company officials also are accused of lying to customers by telling them they were being charged reduced fees because their inventions had merit and by contending Imperial made no profit on its evaluation fees.

The company also falsely claimed to have special license agreements with manufacturers and lied to prospective customers by saying it had a "50-50" rate of success in marketing inventions, federal officials charged.

THE HERALD SERIES disclosed that the training program for new product evaluators amounted to nothing more than a week-long course in learning a sales pitch.

Inventors were asked to pay a fee, usually $125, for the evaluations. After the product received a positive evaluation, (more than 90 per cent of all products were given a chance of success). Imperial tried to get inventors to pay between $1,200 and $1,600 for additional services.

Thompson said the company also steered inventors to Washington Patent Assistance, urging them to seek a patent for their ideas. The company charged nearly $600 for this service.

DESPIITE IMPERIAL'S contentions, investigators said the company has never successfully marketed an invention.

The indictment also notes Imperial falsely told clients that manufacturers had demonstrated an interest in their products, and that their inventors would be exhibited at a trade show. The indictment stated inventors were given "newsletters containing self-laudatory statements about Imperial."

The Herald disclosed that the company newsletter contended that Imperial successfully marketed several products. However persons who developed the products said Imperial had not performed satisfactorily and they were disappointed with the company.

The newsletter also touted the appointment of Vincent Borsattino as the firm's general counsel. The Herald revealed that Borsattino had never received a law

Wheeling Township not implicated in BGA kickback probe

A headline across front pages of Monday's editions of the Herald erroneously implied that Wheeling Township and Wheeling Township Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen were implicated in an investigation of kickbacks to government officials in various Illinois communities.

No charges or implications of impropriety concerning kickbacks were leveled at Olsen or other Wheeling Township officials or employees.

The Better Government Association investigation that prompted the public charges contends that township officials in numerous Illinois counties have been receiving kickbacks for buying supplies from certain chemical companies. The BGA did not implicate Olsen in this scheme, but said his office apparently had paid overblown prices for small amounts of penetrating oil. The Herald's story yesterday correctly reported the BGA's findings, but the headline on the story gave an opposite, and incorrect, impression.

Under provisions for township government in Illinois, offices such as those of the highway commissioner are separate authorities and not under the supervision of other township officers such as township supervisor, auditor or treasurer.

The Herald regrets the erroneous impression.

'Impeachment is when you fire somebody...'

by LINDA PUNCH

"Impeachment is when you fire somebody — like the president — who you wouldn't be able to fire. You take a vote or something."

That's how one Terrace School sixth grader defined impeachment in a current events discussion yesterday afternoon. Like other teachers in the district, Wayne Van Eiten used the latest happenings in the Watergate case as a peg for discussion.

Tossing out the regular lesson plan, Van Eiten told his students "these things (possible impeachment) don't happen very often."

Students seemed divided on the guilt or innocence of President Nixon in view of his actions this weekend.

"I think he should be impeached," one girl said. "If there isn't any incriminating evidence in the tapes, why doesn't he give them up?"

ANOTHER BOY said Nixon may be withholding the tapes "because there could have been something personal on them."

Several of the students expressed concern over the ability of Vice President-designate Gerald Ford to take over if Nixon is impeached.

"I don't think Congress should go along with him right away," one boy said. "We don't know if he's good enough to be Vice President."

by JILL BETTNER

History is far from a dead subject in schools right now as students watch and discuss current events in the Nixon administration that are putting the American system of government to the test.

Presidential power, the mechanics of impeachment and the mandates of the U.S. Constitution are among topics being discussed in area schools in the wake of the series of top governmental shakeups.

Teachers say most students, particularly those in junior high and high school, appear to be fairly well informed on current political events, but unsure of their ramifications.

Instructors are replacing history textbooks with newspapers in discussing American government.

"This has been a great asset to social studies teachers," Norm Reppinger, division head for social science at Wheeling High School said yesterday. "Many times what we teach is too dry for students to be interested in, but they're really concerned about this."

THE IMPEACHMENT of Andrew Johnson and Thomas Jefferson's standoff with the U.S. Supreme Court have become popular topics of discussion as teachers attempt to put President Nixon's actions into perspective for students.

A special half-day schedule is planned tomorrow at Forest View High School to give teachers time to talk about the issues. At other schools, teachers are seizing on student interest to discuss politics.

"I'm kind of impressed with how much the kids know," said Paul Jordan, head of the social science and foreign language department at Buffalo Grove High School. "They seem to be much more interested in what's happening than kids were a few years back."

AT HERSEY High School in Arlington Heights, the issues are being discussed "up and down the halls," said Al Schmidt, social studies department chairman.

Student reactions are mixed to the latest governmental crisis this past weekend when President Nixon fired special prosecutor Archibald Cox and subsequently dismissed Deputy Atty. General William French Smith.

Most instructors feel the teenagers' opinions on the firings probably mirror those of their parents. This is especially true on the question of whether or not Nixon should be impeached for his refusal to turn over the White House tapes that may be relevant to the Watergate investigation.

AT SEVERAL area high schools, teachers report there is very little support for the President. Polls of student opinion conducted in classes ranged from a 50-50 split on the impeachment issue to the majority of those asked favoring the action.

Dan Fox, an instructor at Conant High School in Hoffman Estates said the events of last weekend caused a marked change in opinion on the impeachment question.

A few weeks ago, Fox said, only four or five of his students out of a class of about 30 favored impeachment of Nixon. Yesterday, 19 said they feel he should be ousted.

A change in student attitude was also apparent at Rolling Meadows High School. Commenting on his interpretation of the feelings of his classmates there, senior Tom Sulla said he has seen more reaction to the firing of Cox than on any previous political issue discussed at school.

"More people were outwardly upset than they were before," Sulla said. "There's a feeling of disillusionment with the government now. I think there's more alienation than before."

CYNICISM WITH American politics in general is apparently spreading among many students.

Palatine High School social science department chairman, Larry Peterson, said some of his students are beginning to tune out when the subject comes up.

"Students who favor impeachment are very vocal about it and the others are very quiet," he said. "It's almost like they're pouting. They are angry it's being discussed and they're tired of hearing about it."

No only cynicism but real fear is evident in some students that the American form of government is no longer workable.

JOHN BARBINI, a teacher at Eisenhower Junior High School in Schaumburg, said students "are shaken, they show disbelief and they are questioning the whole system."

Whatever the outcome of present events, both students and teachers agree that it is exciting, if not awesome, to be watching history in the making.

As one boy at Lively Junior High School in Elk Grove put it, "Boy, is this the year for social studies."

City's over-all crime rate up; major offenses down

by JOHN MAES

Over-all crime rates rose 18.7 per cent for the first nine months of 1973, due largely to a sharp increase in minor offenses. Major crimes decreased slightly compared with a similar 1972 period.

The Des Plaines Police Department third quarter report released last week showed a total of 4,020 actual crimes reported for this year, up from a 1972 nine-month level of 3,363.

Actual crimes, according to current police reporting procedures are usually less than total reported crimes. Crimes which occur outside city limits or turned out not to be crimes at all are not listed as actual crimes.

Crimes classified in the report as major offenses including homicide, rape, robbery, aggravated assault and battery, burglary, theft and arson were down 2.2 per cent for this year's nine-month period.

A TOTAL of 1,697 such offenses was shown so far this year in comparison with 1,736 major crimes for the 1972 period.

A sharp drop in this category was noted in arsons which were down 45.4 per cent from 33 in 1972 to only 18 for this year.

The number of auto thefts also decreased significantly with 73 on record for this year as compared with a 1972 level of 102, a 28.4 per cent decrease.

Burglaries, except those from autos were down 8.3 per cent, with 441 in last year's nine-month total to 404 so far in 1973.

Dropping 6.5 per cent were aggravated assaults and batteries. Last year, 183 such incidents were reported as opposed to 171 in 1973 figures.

Simple assault and battery, not classified a major offense, jumped from 59 in 1972 to 82 so far this year, a 38.9 per cent increase.

Thefts showed the largest percentage increase among major crimes, the report stated. The 7.1 per cent rise is reflected in a jump to 621 thefts in nine months this year from last year's level of 586.

Robberies in the past nine months were up 2 per cent over last year from a total of 26 to 30. For the third quarter robberies rose 63.6 per cent from 11 to 18 over July, August and September of 1972.

OF THIS year's quarterly total, 11, or 61.1 per cent have been cleared by arrest.

Lt. Leo Alfano, head of the department's investigation bureau called the clearance rate "tremendous," and said detectives "have been diligent and serious in their pursuit of suspects."

He also said a few suspects have been tied to several of the holdups during recent investigations.

"Armed robbery is the type of crime where we have a lot more information to work with. We work with victims who have seen offenders and their characteristics and we have fingerprints."

Other major crime categories such as homicides, including murder, attempted murder, voluntary and involuntary manslaughter were up from one to three offenses for the three quarters while rapes were down from five to four for the same period.

Minor offenses including fraud, certain narcotics violations, vandalism, sex offenses other than rape and drunk and disorderly conduct jumped a sharp 40.8 per cent over the 1972 nine-month level of 1,649 to 2,323.

Sizable increases in this category were represented in damage to property, sex offenses, drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

INCIDENTS of damage to property rose 57.3 per cent with 735 on record this year to 467 cases in nine months last year.

There were also 357 cases of drunkenness and disorderly conduct this year, a 39.4 per cent rise from the 256 in three quarters in 1972.

Also increasing were sex offenses other than rape which rose 19.6 per cent from 61 to 73.

Drug-related crimes, including possession of marijuana, dropped 18.4 per cent, the sharpest decrease among minor crime rates.

Motor vehicle offenses dropped almost as sharply. The 1973 total of 130 is 17.7 per cent less than last year's figure of 158.

Deceptive practices dropped a slight 3.1 per cent, from 95 to 92 incidents.

The report also showed that 70.5 per cent of all persons arrested for crimes in the city were under age 18.

The number of juveniles arrested increased only slightly. The 1,128 juveniles 16 years and under this year were 1.16 per cent more than the 1,115 arrested in the same period last year.

THE MOST notable increase among juvenile offenses was in aggravated assault and battery, which jumped 28.2 per cent with a nine-month total this year of 59, up from only 46 in 1972.

Increases of 17 per cent were also reflected in youthful burglaries and vandalism.

Crime rates in Des Plaines have been increasing steadily over the last several quarters. Overall crime rates jumped 21 per cent in comparable six month period* in 1972 while first quarter totals were 13 per cent higher this year than in 1972.

Fire board to appeal injury case

The Des Plaines Firemen's Pension Board will appeal a recent court decision halting disability payments to a 36-year-old firefighter and forcing him back to work.

The board voted 4-to-2 at a meeting yesterday to appeal the case of Floman Robert Schaffer, 31 E. Thacker St., who had been receiving pension payments since last September.

Schaffer injured his ankle while fighting a fire in January, 1971, and was required to wear a cast for about eight months after undergoing surgery for the injury.

THE BOARD VOTED in mid-September last year to pay Schaffer $8,275 (65 per cent of his yearly salary) in disability payments. The board's decision was overturned earlier this month however when a Cook County Circuit Court ruled in favor of a Des Plaines City Council suit protesting the board's decision.

The court also ordered Schaffer, a four-year fire department veteran to return to duty. Schaffer was back on the job yesterday.

Schaffer claimed full disability in his pension request, which made him eligible to receive the 65 per cent salary.

Schaffer declined comment on the court decision yesterday pending consultation with his attorneys. However, he said he still has some difficulty walking as a result of the mishap.

According to reports, Schaffer slipped on ice while helping to advance a fire hose which struck his leg and caused him to fall.

Board members voting in favor of the appeal were former fireman Donald Flintz, firemen James Dentz, Don Lechner and Lt. Glen Peterman. City Clerk Eleanor Hohenbach and Compt. Duane Bletz voted against the move.

Meeting today

Chambers weigh forming group

Representatives from 13 area chambers of commerce will meet today at the Old Orchard Country Club in Mount Prospect to discuss becoming part of an area-wide chamber association.

The meeting is being held to determine the interest of the chambers in forming a Northwest Suburban Chambers of Commerce association, which could become a lobby for business interests in the area.

Attending the meeting will be Stan Klyber from the Elk Grove Chamber; Earl Johnson from the Arlington Heights Chamber; Marion Bauer from the Palatine Chamber; Carolyn Jenks from the Wheeling Chamber; Clarence Schlaver from the Mount Prospect Chamber; Carol Beese from the Barrington Chamber; Jerry Hayden from the Itasca Chamber; Bud Patz from the Bensenville Chamber; Stan Lieberman from the Buffalo Grove Chamber; Charles Brazelton from the Hoffman Estates Chamber; Tony Katschuck from the Des Plaines Chamber; Don Rauser from the Schaumburg Chamber, and Harry O'Brien from the Rolling Meadows Chamber.

The association was first discussed last month among five local chambers including Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows, Palatine, Mount Prospect, and Elk Grove. Rolling Meadows chamber director Harry O'Brien has said the group could become a lobby to represent Northwest suburban business on commercial matters pending before the state legislature.

AMONG THE topics that may be considered by the group soon is a plan to extend to the Northwest suburban area the limits of the Chicago Trucking Zone. The zone, which encompasses metropolitan Chicago and a 10-mile radius around the city limits, is an area in which special trucking and freight rates are charged for deliveries to businesses and industries.

Suburban businesses and industries outside the zone must pay a substantially higher trucking fee for deliveries.

O'Brien has said the united chamber group may lobby in Springfield to have the limits of the zone extended to allow businesses in the suburban area to take advantage of the reduced trucking rates.

While the meeting will be the second on the proposed association, some chamber directors indicated the proposal still will need extensive consideration before an association can be formed.

"I have no argument with the theory of it, but I think it still needs a lot of thought," Earl Johnson of the Arlington Heights chamber said. "I think there are some valid reasons to have it, but it will be some time before we come to some kind of conclusion."

Marion Bauer, executive vice president of the Palatine Chamber, said her organization would be willing to participate but added it is still too early to say the group will be formed. "There is a lot to be considered," she said but added the concept of the association is one her organization has been interested in for a long time.

Man arrested when found in garage

A Carpentersville man was arrested early Saturday after police said he entered the garage of a Des Plaines resident, according to reports.

The suspect, Peter James, 77 Alameda, was found trying to hide from police by lying on the floor in the garage owned by James Brown, 750 Cavan Ln.

Police said they learned of the incident after receiving a call of a burglary in progress at the address. Nothing was reported stolen from the unlocked garage, according to police.

James was charged with criminal trespass to property and was released on $1,000 bond. He has been scheduled to appear in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court Nov. 29.

now pending before the Arlington Heights village board.

Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh, who said he knew Klehm as a personal friend for more than 10 years, described him as being "foremost among the people we in the village will miss."

"IF THERE is a single person in my life who symbolizes this area, it is Carl Klehm," Walsh said, "because of his personality, his generosity and as an individual."

Arlington Heights Park District Pres. Charles Cronin called Klehm "a great friend of the park district."

Klehm was a member of numerous professional associations, a director and chairman of the board of the Tollway-Arlington National Bank, a member of the Cook County Farm Bureau, the Arlington Heights Lions Club and Chamber of Commerce.

Klehm is survived by his wife, Lois; three sons, Carl II, Arnold J. and Roy; a daughter, Kathleen; four grandchildren and five sisters.

Visitation is today from 7-9:30 p.m. at Lauterburg and Oehler Funeral Home, 2000 E. Northwest Hwy., and tomorrow from 2-5 p.m. and 7-8:30 p.m.

Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at St. Peter Lutheran Church, 111 W. Olive St., and burial will take place in Memory Gardens Cemetery.

Suspect, 16, in custody

A local youth, 16, who was reportedly involved in an attempted rape and two incidents of indecent exposure in Des Plaines during the last three months, was in custody Friday, according to police.

Police declined to identify the youth because he is a juvenile but said he turned himself over to police late Thursday.

(Ford) does," another boy said.

One student said the Congress would need at "least half a year to cover all the background of what he (Ford) did."

"If Nixon is impeached, some people might not trust Ford," the boy added.

THE CLASS ALSO discussed why Presidents are limited to two terms in office.

"They're limited to two terms because they think they might rule too much," one youngster said. "He'll get too old and won't get new ideas."

Another boy noted that some people might "get so mad they'd assassinate him" if a President served more than two terms.

One youngster offered up a solution to the impeachment dilemma.

"The way I think we should take another vote in the U.S. to decide whether Nixon should be impeached or not," he said.

day and reportedly admitted his part in the incidents under questioning by juvenile authorities.

The most recent incident occurred Oct. 12 when a youth entered the home of a south side Des Plaines woman. The woman told police she was awakened when he turned on her bedroom light and exposed himself to her.

The youth fled shortly afterward but the woman discovered $24 in cash missing from her purse, according to reports.

The youth also has been named in two other incidents which occurred at the Deville Motel, 1275 Lee St., in mid-July and late September. At that time a youth exposed himself to one woman and tried to rape another after entering guestrooms.

POLICE LEARNED of the youth's identity early last week while he was in the Des Plaines police station posting bond for a friend.

An officer noted he fit the description of the suspect given by the three victims.

Detectives later notified his parents and the youth was linked to the offense when he returned to the station Thursday for questioning.

One of the victims later positively identified the youngster in a police lineup.

Police also made a fingerprint match-up of the youth and prints taken from one of the motel rooms.

A delinquency petition alleging attempted rape and burglary against the youth was filed by Des Plaines juvenile authorities Friday. A hearing date will be set for the youth in Cook County Juvenile court.

Police said there was no tie between the youth and several other indecent exposures reported in Des Plaines recently.

Burglars enter home, take record collection

Burglars entered the home of a Des Plaines resident early Friday and stole a clock, a radio and a collection of vintage records valued at $350, said Des Plaines police.

Joseph Monticello, 340 Lawn Ln., told police the burglar broke into his house through a bathroom window.

Police also said burglars obtained an undetermined amount of change after rifling a vending machine inside a local service station.

Police said the burglars entered Molick's Standard, 1596 Miner St., by removing a pane of window glass from the southwest side of the building.

degree nor had he been admitted to the bar to practice law.

Besides Imperial and the patent assistance firm, the indictment charges the company used Imperial Youth Achievement Association, Consolidated Surety, Crown Engineering, Imperial Distributors, Equitable Collection Agency, Craig Marshall and Associates Inc., Pie Enterprises and R and W Enterprises in the swindle. These companies are subsidiaries of Imperial.

THE INDICTMENT names another Imperial official Robert C. Pond as an unindicted co-conspirator. Pond was accused of taking part in the scheme, but will become a prosecution witness, according to federal authorities.

In addition to the federal criminal charges and the Illinois suit, the company also is under investigation in Indiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Carl G. Klehm

Klehm is dead at 57

Obituary on Page 9
by KURT BAER

Carl G. Klehm, well-known operator of the Charles Klehm & Son Nursery in Arlington Heights, died yesterday of what was described as natural causes.

Klehm, 57, was pronounced dead on arrival at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village at 10:30 a.m. yesterday. He reportedly died earlier in the morning of an apparent heart attack at his family home near the intersection of Arlington Heights Road and the Northwest Tollway.

Most recently, Klehm had been involved with the proposed development of a $45 million convention center near the Tollway interchange. However, the Klehm family name has been known in the Northwest Suburbs for 120 years.

CARL KLEHM assumed ownership of the nursery at Algonquin and Arlington Heights roads in 1857 after the death of his father, Charles. Founded in 1836 by John Klehm, a German emigrant, the nursery is known as one of the largest and most successful in the area.

The nursery is particularly famous for its wide variety of peonies. The family also operates nurseries on Hund Road in Lake Zurich and in Itasca.

With the growth of the Northwest suburbs, the business has continued to grow and prosper. Although rumored to be a millionaire, Klehm worked actively in the nurturing and selling of his nursery stock.

He donated plantings for several park sites in Arlington Heights and provided $8,000 worth of free landscaping for the Arlington Heights Memorial Library.

KLEHM HAD recently negotiated a lease with the prospective developers of the Chicago-O'Hare International Trade Center for the use of 45 of the family's 110-acre home site near the southeast corner of the Tollway-Arlington Heights Road interchange.

Klehm's attorney said yesterday that the death would not affect that contractual arrangement or the family's plan to maintain its home on the northern 53 acres of the site.

Planning nears completion

Work to start next spring on $310,000 parks program

by BOB GALLAS

Residents of the Elk Grove Village Park District should be enjoying most of the benefits of a $310,000 park improvement program by next summer. Planning for the massive project is nearing completion and most construction will start in the spring.

On March 31, park district voters approved a $310,000 referendum for park improvement while voting down a $685,000 ice skating rink. Now, almost six months later, some tangible results of the referendum can be seen.

Some seeding has been done at Disney Park next to the park district office at 490 Bluestield Rd. Grading at the park is now going on. When completed next spring, the park will have four baseball diamonds, one of which will be lighted, and two or three tennis courts.

ONLY ABOUT $16,000 of the money has been committed so far, according to Jack Claes, park district director. The largest part was used to purchase a $12,000 multi-purpose building for Olmslead Park, Cypress Lane and Kennedy Boulevard. The structure will be used primarily for a warming house during the ice skating season. It's hoped construction of the building will be completed by this winter.

Another $1,800 was used for playground equipment at Cook School Park. Installation of the equipment has already begun, according to Claes.

As many as 11 additional tennis courts may be in district parks next year. Bids already have been received on six courts, with construction to start this spring. The park district board is expected to discuss construction of additional courts at this Thursday's board meeting.

Bids also are expected to be received Thursday for construction of a new wading pool at the Disney Pool Complex. The pool will be built on the site of the existing spray pool at the complex. The park district board also expects to receive bids this week for the lights for the Disney ball diamond.

REFERENDUM money will be used for the development of three new park sites. Claes said neighborhood meetings for residents of the new park areas should be set up within the next two or three weeks. At the meetings, residents can express their ideas on what type of facilities should go into the parks.

The new parks will be North End Park, off Willow Lane, and two yet unnamed parks west of Ill. Rte. 53, one on West Glenn Trail Road, another on Kathleen Way.

Outlets for new drinking fountains have been installed at many park sites already, according to Claes. Fountains will be installed as soon as they arrive, probably this fall.

Claes said almost all parks will benefit from the referendum with new trees and shrubbery. The new greenery will go in this spring also.

Wheeling Township not implicated in BGA kickback probe

A headline across front pages of Monday's editions of the Herald erroneously implied that Wheeling Township and Wheeling Township Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen were implicated in an investigation of kickbacks to government officials in various Illinois communities.

No charges or implications of impropriety concerning kickbacks were leveled at Olsen or other Wheeling Township officials or employees.

The Better Government Association investigation that prompted the public charges contends that township officials in numerous Illinois counties have been receiving kickbacks for buying supplies from certain chemical companies.

The BGA did not implicate Olsen in this scheme, but said his office apparently had paid overblown prices for small amounts of penetrating oil. The Herald's story yesterday correctly reported the BGA's findings, but the headline on the story gave an opposite, and incorrect, impression.

Under provisions for township government in Illinois, offices such as those of the highway commissioner are separate authorities and not under the supervision of other township officers such as township supervisor, auditor or treasurer.

The Herald regrets the erroneous impression.

Chambers of commerce weigh forming group

Representatives from 13 area chambers of commerce will meet today at the Old Orchard Country Club in Mount Prospect to discuss becoming part of an area-wide chamber association.

The meeting is being held to determine the interest of the chambers in forming a Northwest Suburban Chambers of Commerce association, which could become a lobby for business interests in the area.

Attending the meeting will be Stan Klyber from the Elk Grove Chamber; Earl Johnson from the Arlington Heights Chamber; Marian Bauer from the Palatine Chamber; Carolyn Jenks from the Wheeling Chamber; Clarence Schlaver from the Mount Prospect Chamber; Carol Beese from the Barrington Chamber; Jerry Hayden from the Itasca Chamber; Bud Putz from the Bensenville Chamber; Stan Lieberman from the Buffalo Grove Chamber; Charles Brazalton from the Hoffman Estates Chamber; Tony Katschuck from the Des Plaines Chamber; Don Rauser from the Schaumburg Chamber, and Harry O'Brien from the Rolling Meadows Chamber.

The association was first discussed last month among five local chambers including Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows, Palatine, Mount Prospect, and Elk Grove. Rolling Meadows chamber director Harry O'Brien has said the group could become a lobby to represent Northwest suburban business on commercial matters pending before the state legislature.

AMONG THE topics that may be considered by the group soon is a plan to extend to the Northwest suburban area the limits of the Chicago Trucking Zone. The zone, which encompasses metropolitan Chicago and a 10-mile radius around the city limits, is an area in which special trucking and freight rates are charged for deliveries to businesses and industries.

Suburban businesses and industries outside the zone must pay a substantially higher trucking fee for deliveries.

O'Brien has said the united chamber group may lobby in Springfield to have the limits of the zone extended to allow businesses in the suburban area to take advantage of the reduced trucking rates.

While the meeting will be the second on the proposed association, some chamber directors indicated the proposal still will need extensive consideration before an association can be formed.

"I have no argument with the theory of it, but I think it still needs a lot of thought," Earl Johnson of the Arlington Heights chamber said. "I think there are some valid reasons to have it, but it will be some time before we come to some kind of conclusion."

Marion Bauer, executive vice president of the Palatine Chamber, said her organization would be willing to participate but added it is still too early to say the group will be formed. "There is a lot to be considered," she said but added the concept of the association is one her organization has been interested in for a long time.

OTHER DIRECTORS, like Clarence Schlaver, Mount Prospect chamber executive director, said the association is a good idea that should become more formalized. He said the group could achieve better communication between chambers. "If the other guy is doing a better job, he might be able to tell us how to do it," he said. But rather than serve as a lobby, Schlaver said the group's aim would be more to discuss problems of "mutual concern."

7 youths assaulted at grid game

Elk Grove High School's homecoming game was an unfortunate incident for seven village teenagers. They were assaulted during the game by an unknown youth who tried to rob them.

According to police, the youth, described as 17 to 19 years old, 5 feet tall with brown curly hair and wearing a red and black plaid jacket, approached the teens saying, "Do you have any money? Give it to me."

One girl was thrown to the ground by the assailant.

The teenagers, all students at the high school, said they had never seen the youth in school, but would be able to identify him.

No total amount of money taken was reported by police.

PeeWee team second

The Queen of the Rosary PeeWee team lost its weekend championship game 13-0 against Glen Ellyn. The team is eligible for a consolation championship game with their second-place finish in the Little West Suburban PeeWee League.

Students here 'really concerned' about Nixon crisis

by JILL BETTNER

History is far from a dead subject in schools right now as students watch and discuss current events in the Nixon administration that are putting the American system of government to the test.

Presidential power, the mechanics of impeachment and the mandates of the U.S. Constitution are among topics being discussed in area schools in the wake of the series of top governmental shakeups.

Teachers say most students, particularly those in junior high and high school, appear to be fairly well informed on current political events, but unsure of their ramifications.

Instructors are replacing history textbooks with newspapers in discussing American government.

"This has been a great asset to social studies teachers," Norm Reppinger, division head for social science at Wheeling High School said yesterday. "Many times what we teach is too dry for students to be interested in, but they're really concerned about this."

THE IMPEACHMENT of Andrew Johnson and Thomas Jefferson's standoff with the U.S. Supreme Court have become popular topics of discussion as teachers attempt to put President Nixon's actions into perspective for students.

A special half-day schedule is planned tomorrow at Forest View High School to give teachers time to talk about the issues. At other schools, teachers are seizing on student interest to discuss politics.

"I'm kind of impressed with how much the kids know," said Paul Jordan, head of the social science and foreign language department at Buffalo Grove High School. "They seem to be much more interested in what's happening than kids were a few years back."

AT HERSEY High School in Arlington Heights, the issues are being discussed "up and down the halls," said Al Schmidt, social studies department chairman.

Student reactions are mixed to the latest governmental crisis this past weekend when President Nixon fired special prosecutor Archibald Cox and subsequently dismissed Deputy Atty. General William French Smith.

Most instructors feel the teenagers' opinions on the firings probably mirror those of their parents. This is especially true on the question of whether or not Nixon should be impeached for his refusal to turn over the White House tapes that may be relevant to the Watergate investigation.

AT SEVERAL area high schools, teachers report there is very little support for the President. Polls of student opinion conducted in classes ranged from a 50-50 split on the impeachment issue to the majority of those asked favoring the action.

Dan Fox, an instructor at Conant High School in Hoffman Estates said the events of last weekend caused a marked change in opinion on the impeachment question.

A few weeks ago, Fox said, only four or five of his students out of a class of about 30 favored impeachment of Nixon. Yesterday, 19 said they feel he should be ousted.

A change in student attitude was also apparent at Rolling Meadows High School.

Commenting on his interpretation of the feelings of his classmates there, senior Tom Sulla said he has seen more reaction to the firing of Cox than on any previous political issue discussed at school.

"More people were outwardly upset than they were before," Sulla said. "There's a feeling of disillusionment with the government now. I think there's more alienation than before."

CYNICISM WITH American politics in general is apparently spreading among many students.

Palatine High School social science department chairman, Larry Peterson, said some of his students are beginning to tune out when the subject comes up.

"Students who favor impeachment are very vocal about it and the others are very quiet," he said. "It's almost like they're pouting. They are angry it's being discussed and they're tired of hearing about it."

No only cynicism but real fear is evident in some students that the American form of government is no longer workable.

JOHN BARBINI, a teacher at Eisenhower Junior High School in Schaumburg, said students "are shaken, they show disbelief and they are questioning the whole system."

Whatever the outcome of present events, both students and teachers agree that it is exciting, if not awesome, to be watching history in the making.

As one boy at Lively Junior High School in Elk Grove put it, "Boy, is this the year for social studies."

5 officials of Des Plaines firm indicted for mail fraud

by STEVE BROWN

Five officials of a Des Plaines inventors' assistance company were indicted yesterday on federal mail-fraud charges for their part in an alleged scheme bilking inventors out of more than $1 million since 1971.

U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson announced indictments yesterday, charging the five officials of Imperial Inventors International Inc., of 2250 E. Devon Ave., Des Plaines, with 15 counts of mail fraud each.

Terming the company's business practices a "ripoff," Thompson said the firm falsely told inventors their products had a 50-50 chance of being successfully marketed. He said about 3,000 inventors throughout the country have fallen victim to the scheme.

THOMPSON CITED The Herald and several other news organizations with providing information that led to the criminal charges.

The indictment names Thomas M. Roth, national coordinator; Clair C. Wagner, national codirector; Jack Brumler, training manager; Donald Lewis, and Donald McAllister as the perpetrators of the swindle. Brumler resides at 1300 Pima Ln., Mount Prospect. Roth and Wagner gave the Devon Avenue address. Lewis resides in Rockford and McAllister lives in Hillside.

McAllister also is president of Washington Patent Assistance Inc., an Imperial subsidiary, which was part of the total scheme, Thompson said.

Imperial officials were not available for comment yesterday. If convicted the men face a maximum sentence of 75 years in prison and a $15,000 fine each.

IN A HERALD investigative series published in January, a number of questionable business practices used by Imperial were disclosed.

The federal indictment marks the second major action against the company in the last six weeks. The Illinois Attorney General's Consumer Fraud Division charged the company with violating the state consumer fraud act and deceptive trade practice.

The indictments charge company officials falsely contended Imperial was in a position to develop and market inventions successfully because its facilities and the training and expertise of its staff.

The company officials also are accused of lying to customers by telling them they were being charged reduced fees because their inventions had merit and by contending Imperial made no profit on its evaluation fees.

The company also falsely claimed to have special license agreements with manufacturers and lied to prospective customers by saying it had a "50-50" rate of success in marketing inventions, federal officials charged.

THE HERALD SERIES disclosed that the training program for new product evaluators amounted to nothing more than a week-long course in learning a sales pitch.

Inventors were asked to pay a fee, usually $125, for the evaluations. After the product received a positive evaluation, (more than 90 per cent of all products were given a chance of success), Imperial tried to get inventors to pay between $1,200 and $1,500 for additional services.

Thompson said the company also steered inventors to Washington Patent Assistance, urging them to seek a patent for their ideas. The company charged nearly $600 for this service.

DESPITE IMPERIAL'S contentions, investigators said the company has never successfully marketed an invention.

The indictment also notes Imperial falsely told clients that manufacturers had demonstrated an interest in their products, and that their inventions would be exhibited at a trade show. The indictment stated inventors were given "newsletters containing self-laudatory statements about Imperial."

The Herald disclosed that the company newsletter contended that Imperial successfully marketed several products. However persons who developed the products said Imperial had not performed satisfactorily and they were disappointed with the company.

The newsletter also touted the appointment of Vincent Borsattino as the firm's general counsel. The Herald revealed that Borsattino had never received a law degree nor had he been admitted to the bar to practice law.

Besides Imperial and the patent assistance firm, the indictment charges the company used Imperial Youth Achievement Association, Consolidated Surety, Crown Engineering, Imperial Distributors, Equitable Collection Agency, Craig Marshall and Associates Inc., Pic Enterprises and R and W Enterprises in the swindle. These companies are subsidiaries of Imperial.

THE INDICTMENT names another Imperial official Robert C. Pond as an unindicted co-conspirator. Pond was accused of taking part in the scheme, but will become a prosecution witness, according to federal authorities.

In addition to the federal criminal charges and the Illinois suit, the company also is under investigation in Indiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

now pending before the Arlington Heights village board.

Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh, who said he knew Klehm as a personal friend for more than 10 years, described him as being "foremost among the people we in the village will miss."

"IF THERE IS a single person in my life who symbolizes this area, it is Carl Klehm," Walsh said, "because of his personality, his generosity and as an individual."

Arlington Heights Park District Pres. Charles Cronin called Klehm "a great friend of the park district."

Klehm was a member of numerous professional associations, a director and chairman of the board of the Tollway-Arlington National Bank, a member of the Cook County Farm Bureau, the Arlington Heights Lions Club and Chamber of Commerce.

Klehm is survived by his wife, Lois; three sons, Carl II., Arnold J. and Roy; a daughter, Kathleen; four grandchildren and five sisters.

Visitation is today from 7-9:30 p.m. at Lauterburg and Oehler Funeral Home, 2000 E. Northwest Hwy., and tomorrow from 2-3 p.m. and 7-9:30 p.m.

Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at St. Peter Lutheran Church, 111 W. Olive St., and burial will take place in Memory Gardens Cemetery.

Maryville makes 'Yule wish list'

Maryville Academy in Des Plaines has been included in the 1973 edition of the "Christmas Wish List," published by Catholic Charities of Chicago.

The booklet contains detailed information on the needs of children, elderly shut-ins, families and individuals living in institutions and communities.

"Christmas Wish List" is available at no cost to individuals, adult and student groups, organizations, businesses and others who are seeking ways to help the needy. It was compiled from a recent survey made by Catholic Charities.

The needs listed for Maryville, a home for dependent children located at 1150 N. River Rd., clothing for boys and girls sizes six through adult (new clothing preferred), and toys for boys and girls from 5 to 12 years of age (new toys preferred).

Other gifts needed include sporting equipment such as basketballs, volleyballs, football equipment, camping equipment, gym shoes, hockey sticks, ice skates, roller skates, etc. Joan Mitchell or Grace Maragella, 824-6126, should be contacted for details.

Another Northwest suburban institution, St. Joseph Home for the Elderly of Palatine, is also included on the "Wish List." The home, located at 80 W. Baldwin Rd., has asked for personal drinking cups. Mrs. Sherri Hammer, 358-5700, should be contacted for details.

Copies of the "Wish List" are available from the Public Relations Office of Catholic Charities of Chicago, 126 North Des Plaines St., Chicago, 60606, or call CE 6-3172, ext. 329.

The fund, which has gone through a restructuring, now campaigns in Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg only. It formerly included Hanover Park.

Eleven local agencies are to benefit from money collected this year: area Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and Camp Fire Girls; Twinbrook YMCA; U.S.O.; The Salvation Army; Community Counseling Center and its Service Unit; Clearbrook Center; Northwest Mental Health and the Elk Grove-Schaumburg Township Mental Health Services; the Hoffman Estates Boys Club, and an agency in Elgin helping prevent alcohol and drug abuse.

"We'd like to see a high per cent of return from the residential campaign," said Ed Degan, chairman, adding, "send something; it doesn't have to be a large amount."

LETTERS TO residents were sent out recently. This week businesses in the two villages will be receiving letters asking that collections be taken up amongst employees and that a corporate gift be added.

United Fund representatives will be making follow-up calls on businessmen, asking management to arrange a procedure whereby employees can give a cash donation or contribute through a payroll deduction plan.

Employees from local businesses not aware of a campaign being organized at work, are asked to approach management and see if their help is needed, added Degan.

"We hope to wrap up by Nov. 15," said Degan. The campaign in local schools, giving teachers an opportunity to contribute, starts Nov. 1.

RIGHT-OF-WAY? Children enrolled in the park district's preschool program make way for a passing chicken. The youngsters recently spent an afternoon at the Busse Farm on Higgins Rd. to look for a pumpkin. In addition to the pumpkin, they also got some first-hand experience with other farm products. Jennifer Turkel, left, carefully picks some soybeans to take back to class.

Carsello set to run for Dem committee

It's definite. John J. Carsello, a two-year resident of Schaumburg, will challenge John F. Morrissey in next year's Democratic race for township committeeman.

"I have been asked by many local people to run mainly because of the poor reputation Schaumburg Township's Democratic Organization enjoys," Carsello said Friday.

He believes the Democratic organization needs "reorganizing and revitalizing" and says he intends to make a strong bid for the committeeman post.

"We have many Democrats in this township who are crying out for leadership . . . leadership John Morrissey is not providing," Carsello remarked.

CARSELLO, now semi-retired, was president of Republic Contractors and Builders and Italo-American Marble Co. Both firms are now dissolved, Carsello explained.

His experience also includes 15 years as a juvenile officer with the Veterans Park District of Cook County, a voluntary post.

Carsello says he handled the election campaign of the late Judge Alfred Cillela when that candidate ran for alderman of Chicago's 36th Ward.

"I plan to run a really clean campaign and I expect the endorsement of many prominent Democratic office-holders," Carsello added.

His son, Vince, is considering entering the race for Republican township committeeman in opposition to incumbent Rep. Donald L. Totten.

Morrissey, a private attorney with the Cook County Forest Preserve District as a client, announced plans to seek another term as committeeman last week. He is also considering entering the race for a Democratic state central committee post from the 12th Congressional District area.

He was appointed township committeeman five years ago to fill an unexpired term and won a four-year term in a contested race in 1970.

Carl G. Klehm

Klehm is dead at 57

by KURT BAER

Carl G. Klehm, well-known operator of the Charles Klehm & Son Nursery in Arlington Heights, died yesterday of what was described as natural causes.

Klehm, 57, was pronounced dead

on arrival at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village at 10:30 a.m. yesterday. He reportedly died earlier in the morning of an apparent heart attack at his family home near the intersection of Arlington Heights Road and the Northwest Tollway.

Most recently, Klehm had been involved with the proposed development of a $65 million convention center near the Tollway interchange. However, the Klehm family name has been known in the Northwest Suburbs for 120 years.

CARL KLEHM assumed ownership of the nursery at Algonquin and Arlington Heights roads in 1937 after the death of his father, Charles. Founded in 1856 by John Klehm, a German emigrant, the nursery is known as one of the largest and most successful in the area.

The nursery is particularly famous for its wide variety of peonies. The family also operates nurseries on Rand Road in Lake Zurich and in Rockford.

With the growth of the Northwest suburbs, the business has continued to grow and prosper. Although rumored to be a millionaire, Klehm worked actively in the nurturing and selling of his nursery stock.

He donated plantings for several park sites in Arlington Heights and provided $9,000 worth of free landscaping for the Arlington Heights Memorial Library.

KLEHM HAD recently negotiated a lease with the prospective developers of the Chicago-O'Hare International Trade Center for the use of 65 of the family's 110-acre home site near the southeast corner of the Tollway-Arlington Heights Road interchange.

Klehm's attorney said yesterday that the death would not affect that contractual arrangement or the family's plan to maintain its home on the northern 35 acres of the site.

Tax levy cut gains support

A proposal to reduce the tax levy in Palatine by six cents received the endorsement of the Palatine village board last night.

The board directed the village attorney to find out if it is possible to amend the tax levy ordinance adopted this summer or if it would have to wait until the next tax levy ordinance is adopted next year before the tax levy could be reduced.

The tax levy reduction is designed as an alternate to the tax rebate check proposal. In a written opinion, the village attorney said the tax rebate check proposal could result in legal complications, and recommended the alternate course.

Village Atty. Brad Glass recommended that instead of tax rebate checks the board reduce next year's budget by $72,000, the amount the village intended to rebate to taxpayers.

GLASS EXPLAINED this plan would give the same overall benefit to taxpayers without the added administrative costs of handling the rebate checks and the possible legal hassles.

The village's real estate tax rebate proposal, which was approved by the board in a committee of the whole meeting earlier this month, called for the issuance of a tax rebate check for the 6 cents per $100 equalized assessed valuation increase in village taxes collected in 1973. Formal approval of the tax rebate plan had been expected tonight.

A 6-cent reduction in the tax levy would result in a $6 savings for a taxpayer with a home assessed at $10,000.

"The rebate proposal would place the village into an uncharted area and expose it to potential court challenges," Glass said.

The following legal concerns were raised by Glass:

- Since the taxes have been collected and made a part of the village's general corporate funds, rebating portions of the taxes would leave the village open to a charge of giving away public monies.

- Taxpayers may have taken the permitted deductions on their Federal Income Tax return for real estate taxes paid and problems could arise if some of the taxes are rebated.

- There is no precedent in Illinois for this type of municipal action.

Glass added the charge of giving away public monies could be bolstered by the problems of giving rebates to the taxpayers who originally paid the taxes. He explained many parcels within the village have changed hands and "rebates may not be made to the parties who actually own the property." Also some parcels may be held by decedents' estates or trusts and ownership could be divided among many people. This would make it difficult to allocate a rebate among all the owners, he added.

THE TAX REBATE proposal has been the center of controversy since the April

Wheeling Township not implicated in BGA kickback probe

A headline across front pages of Monday's editions of the Herald erroneously implied that Wheeling Township and Wheeling Township Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen were implicated in an investigation of kickbacks to government officials in various Illinois communities.

No charges or implications of impropriety concerning kickbacks were leveled at Olsen or other Wheeling Township officials or employees.

The Better Government Association investigation that prompted the public charges contends that township officials in numerous Illinois counties have been receiving kickbacks for buying supplies from certain chemical companies. The BGA did not implicate Olsen in this scheme, but said his office apparently had paid overblown prices for small amounts of penetrating oil. The Herald's story yesterday correctly reported the BGA's findings, but the headline on the story gave an opposite, and incorrect, impression.

Under provisions for township government in Illinois, offices such as those of the highway commissioner are separate authorities and not under the supervision of other township officers such as township supervisor, auditor or treasurer.

The Herald regrets the erroneous impression.

Gas line no hindrance to driver test station

A previously undetected gas line on property in Barrington Hills will not prevent the state from purchasing the 40-acre site for a Northwest suburban driver testing station.

Norbert Johnson, head of physical services with Sec. of State Michael J. Howelett, said yesterday that his earlier fears of the site's safety have been allayed.

"I've had a meeting with the National Gas Pipeline Corporation of America. There's no problem," Johnson said. The corporation will pay for upgrading the line and moving it if necessary, according to Johnson.

LESS THAN two weeks ago, Johnson told The Herald that he had received an extension on the state's option to buy the property when state engineers discovered the gas line.

Now, Johnson says all that remains before the state closes the deal to buy the site is to "get a few little technicalities straightened out."

Those details include talks with Howelett and an architect. Although Johnson has not formalized a building design for the station, he promised, "It's going to be acceptable to the community."

The physical services head met with area village attorneys shortly after the state took out an option, and he has reportedly agreed to meet with municipal officials after the state purchases the site.

The land has a reported purchase price of $112,000 and is located near Ill. Rte. 59 in southern Barrington Hills.

THE SITE HAD been eliminated from a group of three recommended sites submitted by a local search committee to Howelett, a Democrat, earlier this year. The committee members were selected by Republican Sec. of State John W. Lewis. Committee members claim that the site is too far from sewer and water lines to be economically feasible and has poor access from the Northwest Tollway.

State officials say those problems will be overcome.

The facility will cost an estimated $1.5 million when completed. It will include on-the-road testing lanes for the driving test. Current driver testing stations closest to Northwest suburban residents are in Lombard and Elgin.

FISH chapter here?

Area church representatives and interested residents will be meeting Thursday to discuss establishing a FISH international service program in Palatine and Rolling Meadows.

The meeting will start at 8 p.m. at the United Methodist Church, 123 N. Plum Grove Rd., Palatine. FISH is a volunteer organization providing free services. More information is available by calling Winnie Blake at 359-1528 or Renee Lipham at 359-6066.

The indictments charge company officially falsely contended Imperial was in a position to develop and market inventions successfully because its facilities and the training and expertise of its staff.

The company officials also are accused of lying to customers by telling them they were being charged reduced fees because their inventions had merit and by contending Imperial made no profit on its evaluation fees.

The company also falsely claimed to have special license agreements with manufacturers and lied to prospective customers by saying it had a "50-50" rate of success in marketing inventions, federal officials charged.

THE HERALD SERIES disclosed that the training program for new product evaluators amounted to nothing more than a week-long course in learning a sales pitch.

Inventors were asked to pay a fee, usually $125, for the evaluations. After the product received a positive evaluation, (more than 90 per cent of all products were given a chance of success). Imperial tried to get inventors to pay between $1,200 and $1,600 for additional services. Thompson said the company also steered inventors to Washington Patent Assistance, urging them to seek a patent for their ideas. The company charged nearly $600 for this service.

DESPITE IMPERIAL'S contentions, investigators said the company has never successfully marketed an invention.

The indictment also notes Imperial falsely told clients that manufacturers had demonstrated an interest in their products, and that their inventions would be exhibited at a trade show. The indictment stated inventors were given "newsletters containing self-laudatory statements about Imperial."

The Herald disclosed that the company newsletter contended that Imperial successfully marketed several products. However persons who developed the products said Imperial had not performed satisfactorily and they were disappointed with the company.

The newsletter also touted the appointment of Vincent Borsattino as the firm's general counsel. The Herald revealed that Borsattino had never received a law degree nor had he been admitted to the bar to practice law.

Besides Imperial and the patent assistance firm, the indictment charges the company used Imperial Youth Achievement Association, Consolidated Surety, Crown Engineering, Imperial Distributors, Equitable Collection Agency, Craig Marshall and Associates Inc., Pic Enterprises and R and W Enterprises in the swindle. These companies are subsidiaries of Imperial.

THE INDICTMENT names another Imperial official Robert C. Pond as an unindicted co-conspirator. Pond was accused of taking part in the scheme, but will become a prosecution witness, according to federal authorities.

In addition to the federal criminal charges and the Illinois suit, the company also is under investigation in Indiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

now pending before the Arlington Heights Village Board.

Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh, who said he knew Klehm as a personal friend for more than 10 years, described him as being "foremost among the people we in the village will miss."

"IF THERE is a single person in my life who symbolizes this area, it is Carl Klehm," Walsh said, "because of his personality, his generosity and as an individual."

Arlington Heights Park District Pres. Charles Cronin called Klehm "a great friend of the park district."

Klehm was a member of numerous professional associations, a director and chairman of the board of the Tollway-Arlington National Bank, a member of the Cook County Farm Bureau, the Arlington Heights Lions Club and Chamber of Commerce.

Klehm is survived by his wife, Lois; three sons, Carl H., Arnold J. and Roy; a daughter, Kathleen; four grandchildren and five sisters.

Visitation is today from 7-9:30 p.m. at Lauterburg and Oehler Funeral Home, 2000 E. Northwest Hwy., and tomorrow from 2-5 p.m. and 7-9:30 p.m.

Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at St. Peter Lutheran Church, 111 W. Olive St., and burial will take place in Memory Gardens Cemetery.

PALATINE

Recycling center open

Cans, bottles and newspapers will be accepted at the new Palatine recycling center on N. Smith Street near Northwest Highway on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The recycling center is open on the second and fourth Saturdays of every month and is manned by volunteers from various community organizations. The Palatine League for Women Voters will staff the center on Saturday.

Cans should be washed, labels removed and flattened, if possible. Metal rings and labels should be removed from bottles and newspapers should be bundled.

Absentee library ballots

Absentee ballots for the $1.3 million library building referendum on Nov. 6 in Palatine are now available at the Palatine Village Hall, 54 S. Brockway St.

A voting booth has been set up at village hall so Palatine residents who will be out of town on Nov. 6 can cast their absentee ballot immediately after filling out the absentee ballot application. Parents may also pick up absentee ballot applications for out-of-town college children who are registered to vote. Absentee ballots will be accepted until Nov. 5.

Palatine residents may also register to vote in the Nov. 6 election at village hall. To be eligible to vote a person must be over 18 years old and have lived in Palatine for 30 days. There is no deadline for registration to be eligible to vote in the Nov. 6 election.

Candy Day success

Candy Day, an annual event, sponsored by the Palatine Lions Club earlier this month, brought in $3,400 for programs for the blind and visually handicapped. The Lions' goal for the two days of candy sales was $3,000 according to chairman Ed Naranjo.

Power line break closes Sanborn School

A break in power lines closed Sanborn School, 101 N. Oak, early yesterday morning, but school officials expected classes to resume this morning.

Assistant Supt. Joseph Kiszka said yesterday the break would be repaired before class today unless unforeseen problems appeared.

Principal Martin Moon said the electric company had promised to work around the clock in an effort to replace the cable before this morning.

village elections. The Republicans swept the April elections on a campaign platform promising tax rebates of the "unnecessary" 1973 tax increases. When the Republicans attempted to carry out their campaign promise they were informed the cost of distributing tax rebate checks would be prohibitive.

At that time the Republicans opted for a compromise program of refunding a sum equal to the tax rebate checks in the form of free garbage bags. This plan ran into opposition from condominium and business owners who pay taxes but would not benefit from the free garbage bag program.

The board decided informally to return to its original plan of giving tax rebates earlier this month when he learned the processing of tax rebate checks would not be "as big an administrative headache" as originally thought.

Local students scoring below national norms

The old 'new math' on way out here

by REGINA OEHLER

A new mathematics program is being piloted in Palatine-Rolling Meadows School Dist. 15 because students scored below national averages on standardized tests given last year.

The new program, which started in all grades of seven elementary schools this fall, combines modern math with practical applications.

The old modern math program is being dropped because students tested below national averages on practical applications of math — word problems — though they tested at or slightly above average on most other subjects.

WALLY FRICKER, math department chairman, blamed the low scores on modern math, which emphasizes theory instead of problems and computations.

The students scored at or slightly above national averages on mathematics theory.

"The answer is not to go back to traditional math," Fricker said. He added that a return to old math, which consists mostly of simple memorizing, would not necessarily improve math skills.

"Modern math has put meaning into mathematics," Fricker said. "I think we've learned a great deal from modern math but in too many cases math was taught unto itself."

HE SAID THAT much of the modern math theory and terminology was helpful to math majors, but not especially helpful to the average student whose future math needs could be limited to shopping and working out bills.

The average student would be facing word problems — at 30 cents a pound, how much would 2½ pounds of an item cost? And this is where the district's modern math is weakest, according to the recent testing.

"Math has to be related with concrete, everyday situations," Fricker said. "This is a very, very important part of math."

His answer was not to scrap the district's modern math program entirely, but to look for a new math series which would continue modern math with some practical elements.

INSTEAD OF working with complicated mathematical equations to describe a circle, students will face a wagon wheel. Some of the confusing terminology — such as the difference between a number and numeral — will be dropped, though the idea still will come through in a different manner.

After several months of study last year, a 22-member evaluation team suggested the district pilot "Investigating School Mathematics" by Addison Wesley. This, along with three other math programs used as supplements, began this fall at Marion Jordan, Stuart Paddock, Pleasant Hill, Jonas Salk, Virginia Lake, Willow Bend and Joel Wood schools.

Several reasons were given for choosing this series, including:

- The mathematics vocabulary is sufficient without being too sophisticated.

- Many experiences with practical applications of problem solving are provided for the students.

- The program is activity orientated and can be used by all types of class groupings and teaching styles.

THE OTHER three programs that can be used in addition to the Wesley series are "Project Mathematics," by Winston Press; "Mathematics Target System," by American Book Co., and "Silver Burdett Mathematics System," by Silver Burdett.

Fricker said he hopes a final decision on a mathematics series will be made in March. Most math programs are piloted one year before being introduced into all the district schools, Fricker said.

He also said that the district would be looking at other math programs this year.

Mr. Average: Nixon hiding something

President Nixon must have "something to hide" in the Watergate tapes he has refused to release, but the President should not be impeached, according to Mr. Average American, Richard Johnson.

Johnson, the Rolling Meadows man selected last year by computers as representative of the average American, said yesterday Mr. Nixon's firing of special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox and Deputy Atty. Gen. William French Smith and the resignation of Atty. Gen. Elliot Richardson during the weekend indicate the tapes must reveal information the President cannot afford to have made public.

MR. NIXON ordered Cox fired rather than abide by a court order to relinquish the tape recordings of White House conversations bearing on the Watergate matter to the special prosecutor. Richardson resigned because of the firing and Ruckelshaus was dismissed when he refused to fire Cox.

"To me it seems that there really must be something in those tapes that he (the President) wants to hide," Johnson said. "First he appoints someone to do a job and then when he gets close to something, he's fired."

"But I hope for his sake he is not impeached," Johnson added. "I wouldn't want to see any president impeached. That's a very drastic action and I hope for his sake it doesn't come to that."

Johnson's opinions on national, and particularly presidential affairs, have become public interest ever since he was selected as the subject of two television documentaries by the National Public Affairs Center for Television in Washington, one dealing with the pressures of inflation on an average family, and the other a first-hand look at the presidential campaign from the eyes of a typical American.

After spending one week with the George McGovern presidential campaign last year, Johnson revealed after the election that he had voted for President Nixon, the first Republican presidential candidate to win Johnson's vote in 20 years.

BUT FOLLOWING the Watergate revelations earlier this year, Johnson declared he would not have voted in the election had he known of the illegal campaign activities beforehand.

"I don't know if he's that confident that Congress won't start impeachment proceedings against him," Johnson said of the President. "But once someone starts the ball rolling, that's all it takes."

"I just can't fathom what could be in those tapes that would cause him to do this," he said of the weekend firings. "There must be something very valuable in those tapes that he doesn't want disclosed."

"HERE IS a situation where a top man

gets something started toward uncovering this matter and then he is fired. He (Mr. Nixon) must feel he has some special powers in being the president that he can do this.

"If (the Watergate affair) just keeps getting bigger and bigger," Johnson said, "All I can say is Tricky Dick must be pretty sure he is not going to be impeached or else maybe he's so far gone, to use an expression, that he doesn't care anymore. It's a big mess."

And while he may not go along with a call for impeachment, Mr. Average American added, "I won't be satisfied with Watergate until something concrete is resolved on those tapes."

Water pipe break closes Fremd at noon

Classes were dismissed at Fremd High School about noon yesterday after a water main burst in front of the northwest corner of the school building.

High School Dist. 211 Supt. Richard Kolze said water gushed from the broken pipe like a geyser reducing water pressure in the building to almost zero. The building was closed to students and staff due to "inadequate sanitation," he said, but the pipe is being repaired and the school will be open for classes as scheduled this morning.

The pipe is on the school's property and the district will have to pay for repairs, said Kolze. He said yesterday he did not have an estimate of the cost and did not know the cause of the break.

Lutheran leaders visit churches, schools

Two Lutheran leaders, one from India and another from East Germany, will tour the Northwest suburbs tomorrow as part of the "Mission on Six Continents" Lutheran World Federation program.

Henuka, Somasekhar, Principal of Women's Christian College in Madras, India, and the Rev. Carl Ordnung, church representative to the East German Youth Movement of the German Democratic Republic, East Berlin, will visit several Lutheran and educational facilities during their tour tomorrow. Arrangements for the tour were arranged by the Rev. Dennis V. Griffin, pastor of Palatine's Christ Lutheran Church.

The two visitors are part of a group of 12 international church leaders in the United States this month to study American church and community life.

Tootsie Roll drive

The Knights of Columbus will hold their annual Tootsie Roll drive for retarded children on Nov. 2 and 3. Ninety per cent of the proceeds from the drive will stay within the community and the remaining 10 per cent will go to the state organization for the support of retarded children.

Carl G. Klehm

by KURT BAER

Carl G. Klehm, well-known operator of the Charles Klehm & Son Nursery in Arlington Heights, died yesterday of what was described as natural causes.

Klehm, 57, was pronounced dead

on arrival at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village at 10:30 a.m. yesterday. He reportedly died earlier in the morning of an apparent heart attack at his family home near the intersection of Arlington Heights Road and the Northwest Tollway.

Most recently, Klehm had been involved with the proposed development of a $65 million convention center near the Tollway interchange. However, the Klehm family name has been known in the Northwest Suburbs for 120 years.

CARL KLEHM assumed ownership of the nursery at Algonquin and Arlington Heights roads in 1957 after the death of his father, Charles. Founded in 1836 by John Klehm, a German emigrant, the nursery is known as one of the largest and most successful in the area.

The nursery is particularly famous for its wide variety of pines. The family also operates nurseries on Rand Road in Lake Zurich and in Rockford.

With the growth of the Northwest suburbs, the business has continued to grow and prosper. Although rumored to be a millionaire, Klehm worked actively in the nurturing and selling of his nursery stock.

He donated plantings for several park sites in Arlington Heights and provided $9,000 worth of free landscaping for the Arlington Heights Memorial Library.

KLEHM HAD recently negotiated a lease with the prospective developers of the Chicago-O'Hare International Trade Center for the use of 63 of the family's 110-acre home site near the southeast corner of the Tollway-Arlington Heights Road interchange.

Klehm's attorney said yesterday that the death would not affect that contractual arrangement or the family's plan to maintain its home on the northern 53 acres of the site.

Gas lines no hindrance to driver test station

A previously undetected gas line on property in Barrington Hills will not prevent the state from purchasing the 40-acre site for a Northwest suburban driver testing station.

Norbert Johnson, head of physical services with Sec. of State Michael J. Howlett, said yesterday that his earlier fears of the site's safety have been allayed.

"I've had a meeting with the National Gas Pipeline Corporation of America. There's no problem," Johnson said. The corporation will pay for upgrading the line and moving it if necessary, according to Johnson.

LESS THAN two weeks ago, Johnson told The Herald that he had received an extension on the state's option to buy the property when state engineers discovered the gas line.

Now, Johnson says all that remains before the state's option to buy the property when state engineers discovered the gas line.

Now, Johnson says all that remains before the state closes the deal to buy the site is to "get a few little technicalities straightened out."

Those details include talks with Howlett and an architect. Although Johnson has not formalized a building design for the station, he promised, "It's going to be acceptable to the community."

The physical services head met with area village attorneys shortly after the state took out an option, and he has reportedly agreed to meet with municipal officials after the state purchases the site.

The land has a reported purchase price of $112,000 and is located near Ill. Rte. 59 in southern Barrington Hills.

THE SITE HAD been eliminated from a group of three recommended sites submitted by a local search committee to Howlett, a Democrat, earlier this year. The committee members were selected by Republican Sec. of State John W. Lewis. Committee members claim that the site is too far from sewer and water lines to be economically feasible and has poor access from the Northwest Tollway.

State officials say those problems will be overcome.

The facility will cost an estimated $1.5 million when completed. It will include on-the-road testing lanes for the driving test. Current driver testing stations closest to Northwest suburban residents are in Lombard and Elgin.

Wheeling Township not implicated in BGA kickback probe

A headline across front pages of Monday's editions of the Herald erroneously implied that Wheeling Township and Wheeling Township Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen were implicated in an investigation of kickbacks to government officials in various Illinois communities.

No charges or implications of impropriety concerning kickbacks were leveled at Olsen or other Wheeling Township officials or employees.

The Better Government Association investigation that prompted the public charges contends that township officials in numerous Illinois counties have been receiving kickbacks for buying supplies from certain chemical companies.

The BGA did not implicate Olsen in this scheme, but said his office apparently had paid overblown prices for small amounts of penetrating oil. The Herald's story yesterday correctly reported the BGA's findings, but the headline on the story gave an opposite, and incorrect, impression.

Under provisions for township government in Illinois, offices such as those of the highway commissioner are separate authorities and not under the supervision of other township officers such as township supervisor, auditor or treasurer.

The Herald regrets the erroneous impression.

City to inspect balconies again, hoping for repairs

Another round of balcony inspections will be made in Rolling Meadows in an attempt to get apartment owners to perform necessary repairs before legal action is considered by the city.

The decision to attempt again to get balconies repaired properly came during a meeting Friday between city officials and City Atty. Donald Rose.

The meeting had been called to determine options open to the city to resolve the balcony problem which has caused in the last five months the partial or total collapse of four balconies at two city apartment complexes.

No serious injuries have resulted from the incidents.

CITY MGR. James Watson said yesterday the city's building department inspectors and a structural engineer will make another tour of questionable balconies in the city at a yet-to-be determined time. After the inspection, letters will be sent to apartment owners describing the necessary repairs and a specified time in which the repairs should be completed.

If the repairs are not made, legal steps may be taken against the owners, Rose indicated.

The city could take one of two actions against the owners, Rose said. They include imposing a fine against the owners for violations of the building codes or going to court to get an injunction requiring a ban on the use of the balconies until the repairs are made, Rose said.

THE CITY already has used the balcony ban option earlier this year against the Three Fountains complex, although a court order was not required. The ban was ordered in late April after two balconies fell from a building at the complex.

Building and Zoning Officer Sverre Haug has said, however, that a similar ban on the Algonquin Park Apartments balconies cannot be imposed because the structures are the designated second fire exit for tenants.

Two incidents have occurred at the Algonquin Park Apartments involving faulty balconies, including one in May in which a two-year-old boy fell ten feet through his second floor balcony.

Shortly after the incident, Kimball Hill Realty Company, managers of the complex, ordered repairs made on the balconies, including the replacement of rotted boards with new treated wood. The repairs were completed in July, but since the latest city inspections last month, more repairs have been ordered at the complex.

ANOTHER INCIDENT occurred at the complex two weeks ago when a balcony partially gave way as a woman tenant walked along it. The balcony was repaired the following day, but Haug said work at the complex has progressed very slowly.

Friday's meeting was held after aldermen on the public works, building and zoning committee last week called for the city to take steps to require the balconies to be properly repaired and maintained.

Students here 'really concerned' about Nixon crisis

by JILL BETTNER

History is far from a dead subject in schools right now as students watch and discuss current events in the Nixon administration that are putting the American system of government to the test.

Presidential power, the mechanics of impeachment and the mandates of the U.S. Constitution are among topics being discussed in area schools in the wake of the series of top governmental shakeups.

Teachers say most students, particularly those in junior high and high school, appear to be fairly well informed on current political events, but unsure of their ramifications.

Instructors are replacing history textbooks with newspapers in discussing American government.

"This has been a great asset to social studies teachers," Norm Reppinger, division head for social science at Wheeling High School said yesterday. "Many times what we teach is too dry for students to be interested in, but they're really concerned about this."

THE IMPEACHMENT of Andrew Johnson and Thomas Jefferson's standoff with the U.S. Supreme Court have become popular topics of discussion as teachers attempt to put President Nixon's actions into perspective for students.

A special half-day schedule is planned tomorrow at Forest View High School to give teachers time to talk about the issues. At other schools, teachers are seizing on student interest to discuss politics.

"I'm kind of impressed with how much the kids know," said Paul Jordan, head of the social science and foreign language department at Buffalo Grove High School. "They seem to be much more interested in what's happening than kids were a few years back."

AT HERSEY High School in Arlington Heights, the issues are being discussed "up and down the halls," said Al Schmidt, social studies department chairman.

Student reactions are mixed to the latest governmental crisis this past weekend when President Nixon fired special prosecutor Archibald Cox and subsequently dismissed Deputy Atty. General William French Smith.

Most instructors feel the teenagers' opinions on the firings probably mirror those of their parents. This is especially true on the question of whether or not Nixon should be impeached for his refusal to turn over the White House tapes that may be relevant to the Watergate investigation.

AT SEVERAL area high schools, teachers report there is very little support for the President. Polls of student opinion conducted in classes ranged from a 50-50 split on the impeachment issue to the majority of those asked favoring the action.

Dan Fox, an instructor at Conant High School in Hoffman Estates said the events of last weekend caused a marked change in opinion on the impeachment question.

A few weeks ago, Fox said, only four or five of his students out of a class of about 30 favored impeachment of Nixon. Yesterday, 19 said they feel he should be ousted.

A change in student attitude was also apparent at Rolling Meadows High School.

Commenting on his interpretation of the feelings of his classmates there, senior Tom Sulla said he has seen more reaction to the firing of Cox than on any previous political issue discussed at school.

"More people were outwardly upset than they were before," Sulla said. "There's a feeling of disillusionment with the government now. I think there's more alienation than before."

CYNICISM WITH American politics in general is apparently spreading among many students.

Palatine High School social science department chairman, Larry Peterson, said some of his students are beginning to tune out when the subject comes up.

"Students who favor impeachment are very vocal about it and the others are very quiet," he said. "It's almost like they're pouting. They are angry it's being discussed and they're tired of hearing about it."

No only cynicism but real fear is evident in some students that the American form of government is no longer workable.

JOHN BARBINI, a teacher at Eisenhower Junior High School in Schaumburg, said students "are shaken, they show disbelief and they are questioning the whole system."

Whatever the outcome of present events, both students and teachers agree that it is exciting, if not awesome, to be watching history in the making.

As one boy at Lively Junior High School in Elk Grove put it, "Boy, is this the year for social studies."

5 officials of Des Plaines firm indicted for mail fraud

by STEVE BROWN

Five officials of a Des Plaines inventors' assistance company were indicted yesterday on federal mail-fraud charges for their part in an alleged scheme bilking inventors out of more than $1 million since 1971.

U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson announced indictments yesterday, charging the five officials of Imperial Inventors International Inc. of 2250 E. Devon Ave., Des Plaines, with 15 counts of mail fraud each.

Terming the company's business practices a "ripoff," Thompson said the firm falsely told inventors their products had a 50-50 chance of being successfully marketed. He said about 3,000 inventors throughout the country have fallen victim to the scheme.

THOMPSON CREDITED The Herald and several other news organizations with providing information that led to the criminal charges.

The indictment names Thomas M. Roth, national coordinator; Clair C. Wagner, national codirector; Jack Brumler, training manager; Donald Lewis, and Donald McAllister as the perpetrators of the swindle. Brumler resides at 1300 Pima Ln., Mount Prospect. Roth and Wagner gave the Devon Avenue address. Lewis resides in Rockford and McAllister lives in Hillside.

McAllister also is president of Washington Patent Assistance Inc., an Imperial subsidiary, which was part of the total scheme, Thompson said.

Imperial officials were not available for comment yesterday. If convicted the men face a maximum sentence of 75 years in prison and a $15,000 fine each.

IN A HERALD investigative series published in January, a number of questionable business practices used by Imperial were disclosed.

The federal indictment marks the second major action against the company in the last six weeks. The Illinois Attorney General's Consumer Fraud Division charged the company with violating the state consumer fraud act and deceptive trade practice.

The indictments charge company officially falsely contended Imperial was in a position to develop and market inventions successfully because its facilities and the training and expertise of its staff.

The company officials also are accused of lying to customers by telling them they were being charged reduced fees because their inventions had merit and by contending Imperial made no profit on its evaluation fees.

The company also falsely claimed to have special license agreements with manufacturers and lied to prospective customers by saying it had a "50-50" rate of success in marketing inventions, federal officials charged.

THE HERALD SERIES disclosed that the training program for new product evaluators amounted to nothing more than a week-long course in learning a sales pitch.

Inventors were asked to pay a fee, usually $125, for the evaluations. After the product received a positive evaluation, (more than 90 per cent of all products were given a chance of success). Imperial tried to get inventors to pay between $1,200 and $1,600 for additional services.

Thompson said the company also steered inventors to Washington Patent Assistance, urging them to seek a patent for their ideas. The company charged nearly $600 for this service.

DESPITE IMPERIAL'S contentions, investigators said the company has never successfully marketed an invention.

The indictment also notes Imperial falsely told clients that manufacturers had demonstrated an interest in their products, and that their inventions would be exhibited at a trade show. The indictment stated inventors were given "newsletters containing self-laudatory statements about Imperial."

The Herald disclosed that the company newsletter contended that Imperial successfully marketed several products. However persons who developed the products said Imperial had not performed satisfactorily and they were disappointed with the company.

The newsletter also touted the appointment of Vincent Borsattino as the firm's general counsel. The Herald revealed that Borsattino had never received a law degree nor had he been admitted to the bar to practice law.

Besides Imperial and the patent assistance firm, the indictment charges the company used Imperial Youth Achievement Association, Consolidated Surety, Crown Engineering, Imperial Distributors, Equitable Collection Agency, Craig Marshall and Associates Inc., Pic Enterprises and R and W Enterprises in the swindle. These companies are subsidiaries of Imperial.

THE INDICTMENT names another Imperial official Robert C. Pond as an unindicted co-conspirator. Pond was accused of taking part in the scheme, but will become a prosecution witness, according to federal authorities.

In addition to the federal criminal charges and the Illinois suit, the company also is under investigation in Indiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh, who said he knew Klehm as a personal friend for more than 10 years, described him as being "foremost among the people we in the village will miss."

"IF THERE IS a single person in my life who symbolizes this area, it is Carl Klehm," Walsh said, "because of his personality, his generosity and as an individual."

Arlington Heights Park District Pres. Charles Cronin called Klehm "a great friend of the park district."

Klehm was a member of numerous professional associations, a director and chairman of the board of the Tollway-Arlington National Bank, a member of the Cook County Farm Bureau, the Arlington Heights Lions Club and Chamber of Commerce.

Klehm is survived by his wife, Lois; three sons, Carl II, Arnold J. and Roy; a daughter, Kathleen; four grandchildren and five sisters.

Fourth recycling drive

More than 20 new families participated in the fourth recycling drive held last week at the Meadow Trace apartment complex in Rolling Meadows.

Assisting in the effort were Pat Krumwiede, Judy Cleocho, Sue Long and Faye Jones. Residents also took part in 7-year-old Bobby Aphorpe's idea of rent-a-wagon, in which children at the complex were "hired" by residents to help carry recycling materials to the collection site in the complex.

Winner of the $25 rent credit awarded by the apartment management was Roy Sanji of 4730 Arbor Dr. Winners of a shampoo and set offered by Mr. Daniel's Salon in the Meadow Square shopping center were Mary Ann Shrader, 4708 Arbor Dr., and Karen Sauter, 4708 Arbor Dr.

Winners of last week's recycling prizes were Lester Vaughn and James Roberts.

Local students scoring below national norms

The old 'new math' on way out here

by REGINA OEHLER

A new mathematics program is being piloted in Palatine-Rolling Meadows School Dist. 15 because students scored below national averages on standardized tests given last year.

The new program, which started in all grades of seven elementary schools this fall, combines modern math with practical applications.

The old modern math program is being dropped because students tested below national averages on practical applications of math — word problems — though they tested at or slightly above average on most other subjects.

WALLY FRICKER, math department chairman, blamed the low scores on modern math, which emphasizes theory instead of problems and computations.

The students scored at or slightly above national averages on mathematics theory.

"The answer is not to go back to traditional math," Fricker said. He added that a return to old math, which consists mostly of simple memorizing, would not necessarily improve math skills.

"Modern math has put meaning into mathematics," Fricker said. "I think we've learned a great deal from modern math but in too many cases math was taught unto itself."

HE SAID THAT much of the modern math theory and terminology was helpful to math majors, but not especially helpful to the average student whose future math needs could be limited to shopping and working out bills.

The average student would be facing word problems — at 30 cents a pound, how much would 2½ pounds of an item cost? And this is where the district's modern math is weakest, according to the recent testing.

"Math has to be related with concrete, everyday situations," Fricker said. "This is a very, very important part of math."

His answer was not to scrap the district's modern math program entirely, but to look for a new math series which would continue modern math with some practical elements.

INSTEAD OF working with complicated mathematical equations to describe a circle, students will face a wagon wheel. Some of the confusing terminology — such as the difference between a number and numeral — will be dropped, though the idea still will come through in a different manner.

After several months of study last year, a 22-member evaluation team suggested the district pilot "Investigating School Mathematics" by Addison Wesley. This, along with three other math programs used as supplements, began this fall at Marion Jordan, Stuart Paddock, Pleasant Hill, Jonas Salk, Virginia Lake, Willow Bend and Joel Wood schools.

Several reasons were given for choosing this series, including:

• The mathematics vocabulary is sufficient without being too sophisticated.

• Many experiences with practical applications of problem solving are provided for the students.

• The program is activity orientated and can be used by all types of class groupings and teaching styles.

THE OTHER three programs that can be used in addition to the Wesley series are "Project Mathematics," by Winston Press; "Mathematics Target System," by American Book Co., and "Silver Burdett Mathematics System," by Silver Burdett.

Fricker said he hopes a final decision on a mathematics series will be made in March. Most math programs are piloted one year before being introduced into all the district schools, Fricker said.

He also said that the district would be looking at other math programs this year.

Mr. Average: Nixon hiding something

President Nixon must have "something to hide" in the Watergate tapes he has refused to release, but the President should not be impeached, according to Mr. Average American, Richard Johnson.

Johnson, the Rolling Meadows man selected last year by computers as representative of the average American, said yesterday Mr. Nixon's firing of special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox and Deputy Atty. Gen. William French Smith and the resignation of Atty. Gen. Elliot Richardson during the weekend indicate the tapes must reveal information the President cannot afford to have made public.

MR. NIXON ordered Cox fired rather than abide by a court order to relinquish the tape recordings of White House conversations bearing on the Watergate matter to the special prosecutor. Richardson resigned because of the firing and Ruckelshaus was dismissed when he refused to fire Cox.

"To me it seems that there really must be something in those tapes that he (the President) wants to hide," Johnson said. "First he appoints someone to do a job and then when he gets close to something, he's fired."

"But I hope for his sake he is not impeached," Johnson added. "I wouldn't want to see any president impeached. That's a very drastic action and I hope for his sake it doesn't come to that."

Johnson's opinions on national, and particularly presidential affairs, have become public interest ever since he was selected as the subject of two television documentaries by the National Public Affairs Center for Television in Washington, one dealing with the pressures of inflation on an average family, and the other a first-hand look at the presidential campaign from the eyes of a typical American.

After spending one week with the George McGovern presidential campaign last year, Johnson revealed after the election that he had voted for President Nixon, the first Republican presidential candidate to win Johnson's vote in 20 years.

BUT FOLLOWING the Watergate revelations earlier this year, Johnson declared he would not have voted in the election had he known of the illegal campaign activities beforehand.

"I don't know if he's that confident that Congress won't start impeachment proceedings against him," Johnson said of the President. "But once someone starts the ball rolling, that's all it takes."

"I just can't fathom what could be in those tapes that would cause him to do this," he said of the weekend firings. "There must be something very valuable in those tapes that he doesn't want disclosed."

gets something, started toward uncovering this matter and then he is fired. He (Mr. Nixon) must feel he has some special powers in being the president that he can do this.

"(The Watergate affair) just keeps getting bigger and bigger," Johnson said. "All I can say is Tricky Dick must be pretty sure he is not going to be impeached or else maybe he's so far gone, to use an expression, that he doesn't care anymore. It's a big mess."

NURSERY SCHOOL IN THE FALL

At flowering time the Canadian geese are preparing to go south and leave the white ducks alone to feed on the stubs from the children. The woods were beautiful for the fall season, and the children have already had a play ride or two. The holidays are planned for the next week or so, but don't fret if your child misses something, it will all be repeated when the geese return.

See flowering, then decide.

Water pipe break closes Fremd at noon

Classes were dismissed at Fremd High School about noon yesterday after a water main burst in front of the northwest corner of the school building.

High School Dist. 211 Supt. Richard Kolze said water gushed from the broken pipe like a geyser reducing water pressure in the building to almost zero. The building was closed to students and staff due to "inadequate sanitation," he said, but the pipe is being repaired and the school will be open for classes as scheduled this morning.

The pipe is on the school's property and the district will have to pay for repairs, said Kolze. He said yesterday he did not have an estimate of the cost and did not know the cause of the break.

Stoplight work finally begins

After several delays, work has finally begun to install temporary traffic lights at the intersection of Algonquin and New Wilke Roads.

Rolling Meadows City Engineer James Muldowney said the temporary traffic control devices should be operational by the end of the week.

The project is being jointly funded by Rolling Meadows and Arlington Heights at a cost of about $10,000. The lights are being installed by the Commercial Light Company of Chicago.

The temporary lights are being installed in an effort to cut down on the high number of accidents at the intersection. Permanent lights will be installed next year when the state completes the extension of New Wilke Road south from Algonquin Road to Golf Road.

Work on the lights had been expected to start last month but special parts required in the installation by the state at the last minute held up the work.

The booklet contains detailed information on the needs of children, elderly shut-ins, families and individuals living in institutions and communities.

"Christmas Wish List" is available at no cost to individuals, adult and student groups, organizations, businesses and others who are seeking ways to help the needy. It was compiled from a recent survey made by Catholic Charities.

The needs listed for Maryville, a home for dependent children located at 1150 N. River Rd., clothing for boys and girls sizes six through adult (new clothing preferred), and toys for boys and girls from 5 to 12 years of age (new toys preferred).

Other gifts needed include sporting equipment such as basketballs, volleyballs, football equipment, camping equipment, gym shoes, hockey sticks, ice skates, roller skates, etc. Joan Mitchell or Grace Maragella, 824-6126, should be contacted for details.

Another Northwest suburban institution, St. Joseph Home for the Elderly of Palatine, is also included on the "Wish List." The home, located at 80 W.

Baldwin Rd., has asked for personal drinking cups. Mrs. Sherri Hammer, 358-5700, should be contacted for details.

Carl G. Klehm

Klehm is dead at 57

by KURT BAER

Carl G. Klehm, well-known operator of the Charles Klehm & Son Nursery in Arlington Heights, died yesterday of what was described as natural causes.

Klehm, 57, was pronounced dead

on arrival at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village at 10:30 a.m. yesterday. He reportedly died earlier in the morning of an apparent heart attack at his family home near the intersection of Arlington Heights Road and the Northwest Tollway.

Most recently, Klehm had been involved with the proposed development of a $65 million convention center near the Tollway interchange. However, the Klehm family name has been known in the Northwest Suburbs for 120 years.

CARL KLEHM assumed ownership of the nursery at Algonquin and Arlington Heights roads in 1937 after the death of his father, Charles. Founded in 1836 by John Klehm, a German emigrant, the nursery is known as one of the largest and most successful in the area.

The nursery is particularly famous for its wide variety of peonies. The family also operates nurseries on Rand Road in Lake Zurich and in Rockford.

With the growth of the Northwest suburbs, the business has continued to grow and prosper. Although rumored to be a millionaire, Klehm worked actively in the nurturing and selling of his nursery stock.

He donated plantings for several park sites in Arlington Heights and provided $9,000 worth of free landscaping for the Arlington Heights Memorial Library.

KLEHM HAD recently negotiated a lease with the prospective developers of the Chicago-O'Hare International Trade Center for the use of 65 of the family's 110-acre home site near the southeast corner of the Tollway-Arlington Heights Road interchange.

Klehm's attorney said yesterday that the death would not affect that contractual arrangement or the family's plan to maintain its home on the northern 55 acres of the site.

He'll oppose Morrissey

Carsello to seek election to Dem committeeman post

It's definite. John J. Carsello, a two-year resident of Schaumburg, will challenge John F. Morrissey in next year's Democratic race for township committeeman.

"I have been asked by many local people to run mainly because of the poor reputation Schaumburg Township's Democratic Organization enjoys," Carsello said Friday.

He believes the Democratic organization needs "reorganizing and revitalizing" and says he intends to make a strong bid for the committeeman post.

"We have many Democrats in this township who are crying out for leadership... leadership John Morrissey is not providing," Carsello remarked.

CARSELLO, now semi-retired, was president of Republic Contractors and Builders and Italo-American Marble Co. Both firms are now dissolved, Carsello explained.

His experience also includes 15 years as a juvenile officer with the Veterans Park District of Cook County, a voluntary post.

Carsello says he handled the election campaign of the late Judge Alfred Cillela when that candidate ran for alderman of Chicago's 36th Ward.

"I plan to run a really clean campaign and I expect the endorsement of many prominent Democratic office-holders," Carsello added.

His son, Vince, is considering entering the race for Republican township committeeman in opposition to incumbent Rep. Donald L. Totten.

Morrissey, a private attorney with the Cook County Forest Preserve District as a client, announced plans to seek another term as committeeman last week. He is also considering entering the race for a Democratic state central committee post from the 12th Congressional District area.

He was appointed township committeeman five years ago to fill an unexpired term and won a four-year term in a contested race in 1970.

Special police vehicles ready for emergencies

by STIRLING MORITA

Should a disaster strike, Schaumburg police will be ready for it.

Chief Martin Conroy with the help of local businessmen has put together an evidence technician unit van which could be used as a command post or communications center at the scene of disasters or serious crimes.

The Schaumburg Rotary Club put up $4,300 of the $5,100 needed for the step van. Money from the police benevolent fund made up for the difference and added some $6,500 worth of equipment for the van. Many local businessmen donated equipment or provided it at cost to the police department.

"I don't think there's another piece of equipment like it in the area," Conroy said.

HE ADDED that the Cook County Sheriff's Police have smaller vans, but that he wanted to make Schaumburg "self-contained" because of the projected population growth.

"With the growth pattern of the Village of Schaumburg," Conroy said, "you naturally have the crime that comes with it. These things seem inevitable."

"This van will not only service our community, but the neighboring ones as well," he added.

Conroy said the van would make the police department more efficient.

HE ADMITTED that the van would not be used on a day-to-day basis such as patrol. But it will be utilized at serious accidents, plane crashes, bomb threats, factory explosions, armed robberies, murders and tornado destruction.

"It's something that's available when there is an emergency," he said.

Conroy said investigators at the scene of a crime or disaster would now have equipment at one place. Previously the police officers would have to go on time-consuming trips to bring in the right equipment.

The van could also be used as a place to coordinate activities. It will have communication lines linking it with the local police, the fire department, public works and the Illinois State Police Emergency Radio Network (ISPERN).

Every type of rescue and criminal investigation equipment is in the van, he said. Cabinets inside the van will store equipment and protect evidence.

The van has its own generator which will supply electricity in an open area or when electrical lines are down. Intense lights will provide illumination for the scene.

CONROY SAID he is presently training three officers as evidence technicians so that he will have at least one man on each of the three shifts who can handle the operation of the van.

The number of men operating the van would vary depending upon the time of the incident and how serious it is.

The van will not serve as a total crime lab, but will merely act as a shelter for temporary tests or preservation of evidence.

EQUIPMENT in the van includes various lengths of rope, narcotics test kits, fingerprint sets, photography and videotape equipment, a vacuum sweeper for evidence, first aid supplies, a number restoration kit and other supplies.

Power tools are stored near the work bench which is at the rear of the van. Conroy said he was checking into the costs of bomb disposal equipment such as a bomb blanket or a bomb basket.

Conroy estimated the total van would be worth about $17,000 when fully stocked.

He added that he has heard exclamations of surprise from other policemen and about the van.

The expected life span of the unit is about 10 years, he said. It might last longer because the van's engine would not be used as much as one in a patrol vehicle, he added.

"It's through the generosity of the Rotary Club and the people who supported the police benevolent fund that we have a great project for service to the community," the police chief said.

Wheeling Township not implicated in BGA kickback probe

A headline across front pages of Monday's editions of the Herald erroneously implied that Wheeling Township and Wheeling Township Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen were implicated in an investigation of kickbacks to government officials in various Illinois communities.

No charges or implications of impropriety concerning kickbacks were leveled at Olsen or other Wheeling Township officials or employees.

The Better Government Association investigation that prompted the public charges contends that township officials in numerous Illinois counties have been receiving kickbacks for buying supplies from certain chemical companies. The BGA did not implicate Olsen in this scheme, but said his office apparently had paid overblown prices for small amounts of penetrating oil. The Herald's story yesterday correctly reported the BGA's findings, but the headline on the story gave an opposite, and incorrect, impression.

Under provisions for township government in Illinois, offices such as those of the highway commissioner are separate authorities and not under the supervision of other township officers such as township supervisor, auditor or treasurer.

The Herald regrets the erroneous impression.

The Schaumburg Rotary Club donated $4,300 toward the purchase of the van truck while Schaible was president. Conroy recently brought the vehicle over to show off during a Rotary Club meeting.

Union official: Hayter, Nixon actions similar

The actions of Hoffman Estates Mayor Virginia Hayter and President Nixon "evolve from the same sources of governmental abuse," David Finch said yesterday.

Finch is staff representative for the union local representing public works employees fired by the village.

Mayor Hayter's assertion that "her actions cannot be challenged by the electorate is very similar to Nixon's assertion his actions cannot be challenged by any other branch of government," said Finch, adding the two officials have displayed similar "recklessness."

Mayor Hayter termed Finch's suggestion "irrational." Nixon acted alone in the Watergate crisis, while she had the backing of six village trustees in the public works firings, she said. She also noted options of the public to speak at any village board meeting, to telephone or visit her personally at her office.

Finch is "an opportunist," and "he chooses to use me as his battering ram, but forgets there are six trustees; it is the courage of their convictions he is challenging," Mayor Hayter said.

Students here 'really concerned' about Nixon crisis

by JILL BETTNER

History is far from a dead subject in schools right now as students watch and discuss current events in the Nixon administration that are putting the American system of government to the test.

Presidential power, the mechanics of impeachment and the mandates of the U.S. Constitution are among topics being discussed in area schools in the wake of the series of top governmental shakeups.

Teachers say most students, particularly those in junior high and high school, appear to be fairly well informed on current political events, but unsure of their ramifications.

Instructors are replacing history textbooks with newspapers in discussing American government.

"This has been a great asset to social studies teachers," Norm Repplinger, division head for social science at Wheeling High School said yesterday. "Many times what we teach is too dry for students to be interested in, but they're really concerned about this."

THE IMPEACHMENT of Andrew Johnson and Thomas Jefferson's standoff with the U.S. Supreme Court have become popular topics of discussion as teachers attempt to put President Nixon's actions into perspective for students.

A special half-day schedule is planned tomorrow at Forest View High School to give teachers time to talk about the issues. At other schools, teachers are seizing on student interest to discuss politics.

"I'm kind of impressed with how much the kids know," said Paul Jordan, head of the social science and foreign language department at Buffalo Grove High School. "They seem to be much more interested in what's happening than kids were a few years back."

AT HERSEY High School in Arlington Heights, the issues are being discussed "up and down the halls," said Al Schmidt, social studies department chairman.

Student reactions are mixed to the latest governmental crisis this past weekend when President Nixon fired special prosecutor Archibald Cox and subsequently dismissed Deputy Atty. General William French Smith.

Most instructors feel the teenagers' opinions on the firings probably mirror those of their parents. This is especially true on the question of whether or not Nixon should be impeached for his refusal to turn over the White House tapes that may be relevant to the Watergate investigation.

AT SEVERAL area high schools, teachers report there is very little support for the President. Polls of student opinion conducted in classes ranged from a 50-50 split on the impeachment issue to the majority of those asked favoring the action.

Dan Fox, an instructor at Conant High School in Hoffman Estates said the events of last weekend caused a marked change in opinion on the impeachment question.

A few weeks ago, Fox said, only four or five of his students out of a class of about 30 favored impeachment of Nixon. Yesterday, 19 said they feel he should be ousted.

A change in student attitude was also apparent at Rolling Meadows High School.

Commenting on his interpretation of the feelings of his classmates there, senior Tom Sulla said he has seen more reaction to the firing of Cox than on any previous political issue discussed at school.

"More people were outwardly upset than they were before," Sulla said. "There's a feeling of disillusionment with the government now. I think there's more alienation than before."

CYNICISM WITH American politics in general is apparently spreading among many students.

Palatine High School social science department chairman, Larry Peterson, said some of his students are beginning to tune out when the subject comes up.

"Students who favor impeachment are very vocal about it and the others are very quiet," he said. "It's almost like they're putting. They're angry it's being discussed and they're tired of hearing about it."

No only cynicism but real fear is evident in some students that the American form of government is no longer workable.

JOHN BARBINI, a teacher at Eisenhower Junior High School in Schaumburg, said students "are shaken, they show disbelief and they are questioning the whole system."

Whatever the outcome of present events, both students and teachers agree that it is exciting, if not awesome, to be watching history in the making.

As one boy at Lively Junior High School in Elk Grove put it, "Boy, is this the year for social studies."

by STEVE BROWN

Five officials of a Des Plaines inventors' assistance company were indicted yesterday on federal mail-fraud charges for their part in an alleged scheme bilking inventors out of more than $1 million since 1971.

U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson announced indictments yesterday, charging the five officials of Imperial Inventors International Inc., of 2250 E. Devon Ave., Des Plaines, with 15 counts of mail fraud each.

Termining the company's business practices a "ripoff," Thompson said the firm falsely told inventors their products had a 50-50 chance of being successfully marketed. He said about 3,000 inventors throughout the country have fallen victim to the scheme.

THOMPSON CREDITED The Herald and several other news organizations with providing information that led to the criminal charges.

The indictment names Thomas M. Roth, national coordinator; Clair C. Wagner, national codirector; Jack Brumler, training manager; Donald Lewis, and Donald McAllister as the perpetrators of the swindle. Brumler resides at 1300 Pima Ln., Mount Prospect. Roth and Wagner gave the Devon Avenue address. Lewis resides in Rockford and McAllister lives in Hillside.

McAllister also is president of Washington Patent Assistance Inc., an Imperial subsidiary, which was part of the total scheme, Thompson said.

Imperial officials were not available for comment yesterday. If convicted the men face a maximum sentence of 75 years in prison and a $15,000 fine each.

IN A HERALD investigative series published in January, a number of questionable business practices used by Imperial were disclosed.

The federal indictment marks the second major action against the company in the last six weeks. The Illinois Attorney General's Consumer Fraud Division charged the company with violating the state consumer fraud act and deceptive trade practice.

The indictments charge company officially falsely contended Imperial was in a position to develop and market inventions successfully because its facilities and the training and expertise of its staff.

The company officials also are accused of lying to customers by telling them they were being charged reduced fees because their inventions had merit and by contending Imperial made no profit on its evaluation fees.

The company also falsely claimed to have special license agreements with manufacturers and led to prospective customers by saying it had a "50-50" rate of success in marketing inventions, federal officials charged.

THE HERALD SERIES disclosed that the training program for new product evaluators amounted to nothing more than a week-long course in learning a sales pitch.

Inventors were asked to pay a fee, usually $125, for the evaluations. After the product received a positive evaluation, (more than 90 per cent of all products were given a chance of success). Imperial tried to get inventors to pay between $1,200 and $1,600 for additional services.

Thompson said the company also steered inventors to Washington Patent Assistance, urging them to seek a patent for their ideas. The company charged nearly $600 for this service.

DESPITE IMPERIAL'S contentions, investigators said the company has never successfully marketed an invention.

The indictment also notes Imperial falsely told clients that manufacturers had demonstrated an interest in their products, and that their inventions would be exhibited at a trade show. The indictment stated inventors were given "newsletters containing self-laudatory statements about Imperial."

The Herald disclosed that the company newsletter contended that Imperial successfully marketed several products. However persons who developed the products said Imperial had not performed satisfactorily and they were disappointed with the company.

The newsletter also touted the appointment of Vincent Borsattino as the firm's general counsel. The Herald revealed that Borsattino had never received a law degree nor had he been admitted to the bar to practice law.

Besides Imperial and the patent assistance firm, the indictment charges the company used Imperial Youth Achievement Association, Consolidated Surety, Crown Engineering, Imperial Distributors, Equitable Collection Agency, Craig Marshall and Associates Inc., Pic Enterprises and R and W Enterprises in the swindle. These companies are subsidiaries of Imperial.

THE INDICTMENT names another Imperial official Robert C. Pond as an unindicted co-conspirator. Pond was accused of taking part in the scheme, but will become a prosecution witness, according to federal authorities.

In addition to the federal criminal charges and the Illinois suit, the company also is under investigation in Indiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Pat Gerlach

Following a rash of recent local radio and TV guest spots, Hoffman Estates Mayor Virginia Hayter may be faced with the necessity to increase her staff.

If the mayor's guesting schedule continues the way it has, or increases, Gieger, her honor, may have no alternative but to hire a booking agent or at least a public relations assistant.

Now that Mayor Hayter has made her local debut many villagers are wondering what the future may hold for the home town superstar.

MORE LEGAL hassles may be in the offing for Hoffman Estates officials. Pfizer, Inc. has retained Kirkland and Ellis, a Chicago bigtime law firm, as its counsel in opposing a proposed condominium-townhouse development on Mundhank Road property north and west of its warehouse site near the Northwest Tollway and Barrington Road.

Plans for the project call for 490 frame-constructed townhouses on a 52.7 acre tract between Freeman and Barrington roads.

Pfizer officials object to these plans and fear the residential development would deflate the value of their industrial property.

The residential proposal will be reviewed by the village plan commission tomorrow night.

SEND A HAPPY birthday wish to Schaumburg Trustee Ray LeBeau this week. Congratulations are in order for

Gas lines no hindrance to driver testing station

A previously undetected gas line on property in Barrington Hills will not prevent the state from purchasing the 40-acre site for a Northwest suburban driver testing station.

Norbert Johnson, head of physical services with Sec. of State Michael J. Howlett, said yesterday that his earlier fears of the site's safety have been allayed.

"I've had a meeting with the National Gas Pipeline Corporation of America, There's no problem," Johnson said. The corporation will pay for upgrading the line and moving it if necessary, according to Johnson.

LESS THAN two weeks ago, Johnson told The Herald that he had received an extension on the state's option to buy the property when state engineers discovered the gas line.

Now, Johnson says all that remains before the state's option to buy the property when state engineers discovered the gas line.

Now, Johnson says all that remains before the state closes the deal to buy the site is to "get a few little technicalities straightened out."

Those details include talks with Howlett and an architect. Although Johnson has not formalized a building design for the station, he promised, "It's going to be acceptable to the community."

The physical services head met with area village attorneys shortly after the state took out an option, and he has reportedly agreed to meet with municipal officials after the state purchases the site.

The land has a reported purchase price of $112,000 and is located near Ill. Rte. 59 in southern Barrington Hills.

Multiple-family zoning case before planners

Rezoning of 52.7 acres from single-family residential with a minimum lot size of one acre to multiple-family home with density of 10.8 units an acre will be requested of the Hoffman Estates Plan Commission tomorrow.

A hearing will be held at 8:30 p.m. on the request by Nathan Shefner of Chicago, representative of trusts holding title to the site south of Mundhank Road between Freeman and Barrington roads. The hearing will be in the municipal building, 1200 N. Gannon Dr.

The property is held in two trusts with Exchange National Bank of Chicago.

Shefner proposes construction of 490 sale townhouse and condominium units under residential planned development zoning. If the zoning is granted, he will require a variance from the 100-acre minimum development size specified in the ordinance.

AN ORDINANCE revision, reducing the minimum project size to 20 acres, was proposed to the village board earlier this year, but was never brought to a vote. Planning and legal consultants advised the board a complete review of the ordinance would be needed to bring other provisions into accord with a reduced project size. The proposal was shelved.

According to Shefner's application, the project would include 140 one-bedroom units and 350 two-bedroom units. An average of 2.1 parking spaces would be provided for each unit, with 490 garage spaces and 523 outdoor spaces. The maximum building height, as indicated on the application, would be 31 feet for units with garages. Other units would be either 29 or 27 feet tall.

NURSERY SCHOOL IN THE FALL

At Fleetwing Farm the Canadian geese are preparing to go south and leave the white ducks alone to feed on the tubers from the children the woods were beautiful for the fall lookout and the children have already had a pony ride or two. The hayrides are planned for the next week or so, but don't fret if your child misses something, it will all be repeated when the geese return.

Mr. Average: Nixon hiding something

President Nixon must have "something to hide" in the Watergate tapes he has refused to release, but the President should not be impeached, according to Mr. Average American, Richard Johnson.

Johnson, the Rolling Meadows man selected last year by computers as representative of the average American, said yesterday Mr. Nixon's firing of special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox and Deputy Atty. Gen. William French Smith and the resignation of Atty. Gen. Elliot Richardson during the weekend indicate the tapes must reveal information the President cannot afford to have made public.

MR. NIXON ordered Cox fired rather than abide by a court order to relinquish the tape recordings of White House conversations bearing on the Watergate matter to the special prosecutor. Richardson resigned because of the firing and Ruckelshaus was dismissed when he refused to fire Cox.

"To me it seems that there really must be something in those tapes that he (the President) wants to hide," Johnson said. "First he appoints someone to do a job and then when he gets close to something, he's fired."

"But I hope for his sake he is not impeached," Johnson added. "I wouldn't want to see any president impeached. That's a very drastic action and I hope for his sake it doesn't come to that."

Johnson's opinions on national, and particularly presidential affairs, have become public interest ever since he was selected as the subject of two television documentaries by the National Public Affairs Center for Television in Washington.

Carl G. Klehm

Klehm is dead at 57

Carl G. Klehm, well-known operator of the Charles Klehm & Son Nursery in Arlington Heights, died yesterday of what was described as natural causes.

on arrival at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village at 10:30 a.m. yesterday. He reportedly died earlier in the morning of an apparent heart attack at his family home near the intersection of Arlington Heights Road and the Northwest Tollway.

Most recently, Klehm had been involved with the proposed development of a $65 million convention center near the Tollway interchange. However, the Klehm family name has been known in the Northwest Suburbs for 120 years.

CARL KLEHM assumed ownership of the nursery at Algonquin and Arlington Heights roads in 1957 after the death of his father, Charles. Founded in 1838 by John Klehm, a German emigrant, the nursery is known as one of the largest and most successful in the area.

The nursery is particularly famous for its wide variety of peonies. The family also operates nurseries on Rand Road in Lake Zurich and in Rockford.

With the growth of the Northwest suburbs, the business has continued to grow and prosper. Although rumored to be a millionaire, Klehm worked actively in the nurturing and selling of his nursery stock.

He donated plantings for several park sites in Arlington Heights and provided $9,000 worth of free landscaping for the Arlington Heights Memorial Library.

KLEHM HAD recently negotiated a lease with the prospective developers of the Chicago-O'Hare International Trade Center for the use of 65 of the family's 110-acre home site near the southeast corner of the Tollway-Arlington Heights Road interchange.

Klehm's attorney said yesterday that the death would not affect that contractual arrangement or the family's plan to maintain its home on the northern 53 acres of the site.

Called 'Active Citizens Association'

New citizen group formed as 'watchdog' of local issues

A citizens group is being formed in Mount Prospect to keep tabs and take stands on local happenings.

About half of the 15 members of the new group previously belonged to a group known first as a citizen's watchdog committee and later as the "Underdevelopment Commission."

Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert last June publicly criticized the now-defunct group as being a politically motivated organization designed to harass the village board.

Warren W. Arend, chairman of the new organization, called the Active Citizens Association, said it is not politically motivated.

"WE HAVE TEICHERT backers and Minton backers," he said, in reference to the mayor and his opponent in last spring's election, Michael H. Minton.

"That's what we're hoping for," he added, "—a cross section of people. We would like to have people from either side of the fence join with us."

The group has met informally twice in the past four weeks and is making plans to incorporate, according to Arend.

He identified other leaders of the group as Joann Rhea, 1829 Palm Dr., and Frank Cimino, 115 S. Hi-Lusi Ave.

Arend described the purpose of the group as attending village board and committee meetings to become aware of what is happening in the village and taking stands on matters of general interest.

THE GROUP'S first public stand was outlined yesterday in a letter to the editor of The Herald in which Arend attacked widespread development of apartment complexes.

"There are currently some 4,900 multiple-family units under construction in the village, not to mention those which already exist," he stated. "Where are we going?"

Arend said stands may also be taken on such issues as low- and moderate-income housing, secret land trusts and the future of the Central School site.

"We will speak out on other items, too, when we feel something should be said, either pro or con," he said.

Arend said the Active Citizens Association was formed to give more weight to stands on issues than individual opinions could provide. "As individuals we felt we weren't really accomplishing what we were after," he said. "As a group, we felt we could get a little more recognition and accomplish a little more."

Wheeling Township not implicated in BGA kickback probe

A headline across front pages of Monday's editions of the Herald erroneously implied that Wheeling Township and Wheeling Township Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen were implicated in an investigation of kickbacks to government officials in various Illinois communities.

No charges or implications of impropriety concerning kickbacks were leveled at Olsen or other Wheeling Township officials or employees.

The Better Government Association investigation that prompted the public charges contends that township officials in numerous Illinois counties have been receiving kickbacks for buying supplies from certain chemical companies. The BGA did not implicate Olsen in this scheme, but said his office apparently had paid overblown prices for small amounts of penetrating oil. The Herald's story yesterday correctly reported the BGA's findings, but the headline on the story gave an opposite, and incorrect, impression.

Under provisions for township government in Illinois, offices such as those of the highway commissioner are separate authorities and not under the supervision of other township officers such as township supervisor, auditor or treasurer.

The Herald regrets the erroneous impression.

No more new police until January?

The Mount Prospect Police Department will remain undermanned at least until January. Already four men short with 39 sworn officers, the department will not be able to hire an additional 11 budgeted policemen by the Nov. 1 village-board-approved date.

A member of the village's board of fire and police commissioners, which has worked for several months on a batch of new policemen applicants, said yesterday it will be at least three, and more likely four, weeks before the commission can issue an eligibility list.

Comr. Joseph J. Grittani said the last group of oral interviews were to be conducted last night. The 55 applicants still in the running have medical examinations and background checks left to go through.

Hoped-for deadlines of Oct. 1 and then Nov. 1 have been abandoned by both the commission and village officials, making Mid-November the third target date.

All new police officers must undergo a 240-hour or six-week training course before they are available for on-street duty. Thus the earliest the new men could be available would be early January.

The police department had made reservations in the cadet training school that starts Oct. 27, but these have had to be cancelled, according to Police Sgt. Joseph Bopp. Bopp said seven or eight new reservations have been made for the Nov. 15 class.

Bopp was unsure when the remainder of the new policemen would be able to start training. He said further reservations have not been made because of uncertainty over the size of the final eligibility list.

GRITTANI TOO was unsure over what that final number might be, but did say, "We're not going to come up with 55 on the final list." There were 55 applicants left when the oral exams began.

Medical checks for these final applicants have been scheduled through at least Nov. 9 and some may be later.

At almost all stages the processing of applicants has been behind schedule, mainly due to the large number of applicants. The oral exams which ended last night were to have ended Oct. 16, according to one of the previous schedules.

Mount Shire fire probe continues

Mount Prospect fire officials continued their investigation yesterday of Sunday's $5,000 fire at the Mount Shire Apartments.

The fire, which was restricted to one apartment at 1801 W. Golf Rd., may have been electrical in nature, one fire official said. The fire was reported at 5:16 p.m.

Reportedly, the fire began in a bedroom of the apartment. Listed as occupants of the apartment were J. Aliotta, R. Hasselmann and M. Cassin. Some 800 gallons of water were used to extinguish the blaze.

Other occupants of the apartment building were evacuated.

Students here 'really concerned' about Nixon crisis

by JILL BETTNER

History is far from a dead subject in schools right now as students watch and discuss current events in the Nixon administration that are putting the American system of government to the test.

Presidential power, the mechanics of impeachment and the mandates of the U.S. Constitution are among topics being discussed in area schools in the wake of the series of top governmental shakeups.

Teachers say most students, particularly those in junior high and high school, appear to be fairly well informed on current political events, but unsure of their ramifications.

Instructors are replacing history textbooks with newspapers in discussing American government.

"This has been a great asset to social studies teachers," Norm Reppling, division head for social science at Wheeling High School said yesterday. "Many times what we teach is too dry for students to be interested in, but they're really concerned about this."

THE IMPEACHMENT of Andrew Johnson and Thomas Jefferson's standoff with the U.S. Supreme Court have become popular topics of discussion as teachers attempt to put President Nixon's actions into perspective for students.

A special half-day schedule is planned tomorrow at Forest View High School to give teachers time to talk about the issues. At other schools, teachers are seizing on student interest to discuss politics.

"I'm kind of impressed with how much the kids know," said Paul Jordan, head of the social science and foreign language department at Buffalo Grove High School. "They seem to be much more interested in what's happening than kids were a few years back."

AT HERSEY High School in Arlington Heights, the issues are being discussed "up and down the halls," said Al Schmidt, social studies department chairman.

Student reactions are mixed to the latest governmental crisis this past weekend when President Nixon fired special prosecutor Archibald Cox and subsequently dismissed Deputy Atty. General William French Smith.

Most instructors feel the teenagers' opinions on the firings probably mirror those of their parents. This is especially true on the question of whether or not Nixon should be impeached for his refusal to turn over the White House tapes that may be relevant to the Watergate investigation.

AT SEVERAL area high schools, teachers report there is very little support for the President. Polls of student opinion conducted in classes ranged from a 50-50 split on the impeachment issue to the majority of those asked favoring the action.

Dan Fox, an instructor at Conant High School in Hoffman Estates said the events of last weekend caused a marked change in opinion on the impeachment question.

A few weeks ago, Fox said, only four or five of his students out of a class of about 30 favored impeachment of Nixon. Yesterday, 19 said they feel he should be ousted.

A change in student attitude was also apparent at Rolling Meadows High School.

Commenting on his interpretation of the feelings of his classmates there, senior Tom Sulla said he has seen more reaction to the firing of Cox than on any previous political issue discussed at school.

"More people were outwardly upset than they were before," Sulla said. "There's a feeling of disillusionment with the government now. I think there's more alienation than before."

CYNICISM WITH American politics in general is apparently spreading among many students.

Palatine High School social science department chairman, Larry Peterson, said some of his students are beginning to tune out when the subject comes up.

"Students who favor impeachment are very vocal about it and the others are very quiet," he said. "It's almost like they're pouting. They are angry it's being discussed and they're tired of hearing about it."

No only cynicism but real fear is evident in some students that the American form of government is no longer workable.

JOHN BARBINI, a teacher at Eisenhower Junior High School in Schaumburg, said students "are shaken, they show disbelief and they are questioning the whole system."

Whatever the outcome of present events, both students and teachers agree that it is exciting, if not awesome, to be watching history in the making.

As one boy at Lively Junior High School in Elk Grove put it, "Boy, is this the year for social studies."

5 officials of Des Plaines firm indicted for mail fraud

by STEVE BROWN

Five officials of a Des Plaines inventors' assistance company were indicted yesterday on federal mail-fraud charges for their part in an alleged scheme bilking inventors out of more than $1 million since 1971.

U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson announced indictments yesterday, charging the five officials of Imperial Inventors International Inc., of 2250 E. Devon Ave., Des Plaines, with 15 counts of mail fraud each.

Termining the company's business practices as a "ripoff," Thompson said the firm falsely told inventors their products had a 50-50 chance of being successfully marketed. He said about 3,000 inventors throughout the country have fallen victim to the scheme.

THOMPSON CREDITED The Herald and several other news organizations with providing information that led to the criminal charges.

The indictment names Thomas M. Roth, national coordinator; Clair C. Wagner, national codirector; Jack Brumley, training manager; Donald Lewis, and Donald McAllister as the perpetrators of the swindle. Brumley resides at 1300 Plima Ln., Mount Prospect. Roth and Wagner gave the Devon Avenue address. Lewis resides in Rockford and McAllister lives in Hillside.

McAllister also is president of Washington Patent Assistance Inc., an Imperial subsidiary, which was part of the total scheme, Thompson said.

Imperial officials were not available for comment yesterday. If convicted the men face a maximum sentence of 75 years in prison and a $15,000 fine each.

IN A HERALD investigative series published in January, a number of questionable business practices used by Imperial were disclosed.

The federal indictment marks the second major action against the company in the last six weeks. The Illinois Attorney General's Consumer Fraud Division charged the company with violating the state consumer fraud act and deceptive trade practice.

The indictments charge company officially falsely contended Imperial was in a position to develop and market inventions successfully because its facilities and the training and expertise of its staff.

The company officials also are accused of lying to customers by telling them they were being charged reduced fees because their inventions had merit and by contending Imperial made no profit on its evaluation fees.

The company also falsely claimed to have special license agreements with manufacturers and lied to prospective customers by saying it had a "50-50" rate of success in marketing inventions, federal officials charged.

THE HERALD SERIES disclosed that the training program for new product evaluators amounted to nothing more than a week-long course in learning a sales pitch.

Inventors were asked to pay a fee, usually $125, for the evaluations. After the product received a positive evaluation, (more than 90 per cent of all products were given a chance of success). Imperial tried to get inventors to pay between $1,200 and $1,600 for additional services.

Thompson said the company also steered inventors to Washington Patent Assistance, urging them to seek a patent for their ideas. The company charged nearly $600 for this service.

DESPITE IMPERIAL'S contentions, investigators said the company has never successfully marketed an invention.

The indictment also notes Imperial falsely told clients that manufacturers had demonstrated an interest in their products, and that their inventions would be exhibited at a trade show. The indictment stated inventors were given "newsletters containing self-laudatory statements about Imperial."

The Herald disclosed that the company newsletter contended that Imperial successfully marketed several products. However persons who developed the products said Imperial had not performed satisfactorily and they were disappointed with the company.

The newsletter also touted the appointment of Vincent Borsattino as the firm's general counsel. The Herald revealed that Borsattino had never received a law degree nor had he been admitted to the bar to practice law.

Besides Imperial and the patent assistance firm, the indictment charges the company used Imperial Youth Achievement Association, Consolidated Surety, Crown Engineering, Imperial Distributors, Equitable Collection Agency, Craig Marshall and Associates Inc., Pic Enterprises and R and W Enterprises in the swindle. These companies are subsidiaries of Imperial.

THE INDICTMENT names another Imperial official Robert C. Pond as an unindicted co-conspirator. Pond was accused of taking part in the scheme, but will become a prosecution witness, according to federal authorities.

In addition to the federal criminal charges and the Illinois suit, the company also is under investigation in Indiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Gas lines no hindrance to driver testing station

A previously undetected gas line on property in Barrington Hills will not prevent the state from purchasing the 40-acre site for a Northwest suburban driver testing station.

Norbert Johnson, head of physical services with Sec. of State Michael J. Howlett, said yesterday that his earlier fears of the site's safety have been allayed.

"I've had a meeting with the National Gas Pipeline Corporation of America, There's no problem," Johnson said. The corporation will pay for upgrading the line and moving it if necessary, according to Johnson.

LESS THAN two weeks ago, Johnson told The Herald that he had received an extension on the state's option to buy the property when state engineers discovered the gas line.

Now, Johnson says all that remains before the state's option to buy the property when state engineers discovered the gas line.

The physical services head met with area village attorneys shortly after the state took out an option, and he has reportedly agreed to meet with municipal officials after the state purchases the site.

The land has a reported purchase price of $12,000 and is located near Ill. Rte. 59 in southern Barrington Hills.

THE SITE HAD been eliminated from a group of three recommended sites submitted by a local search committee to Howlett, a Democrat, earlier this year. The committee members were selected by Republican Sec. of State John W. Lewis. Committee members claim that the site is too far from sewer and water lines to be economically feasible and has poor access from the Northwest Tollway.

State officials say those problems will be overcome.

Lil Floros

South Church-Community Baptist "rocked" last Sunday morning at the 8:30 a.m. service when Godspell was performed. Fifty high school students from 14 local churches, captured the excitement of the currently popular movie and stage play in their version of the musical.

There was a bit of a circus mood with outlandish costumes and makeup, rollicking music, noisy shouting and showy lighting. The production is totally contemporary.

The congregation, or audience, literally leaped to its feet at the conclusion for a thrilling standing ovation.

Star of the production is Chris Corporan, 310 S. Derbyshire, Arlington Heights, who also is production and music director. He plays a mad Christ who recites Biblical parables that are alive with spontaneity and sincerity. Very real messages are delivered.

JOHN COOPER, co-director, 2608 Bel Aire, Arlington Heights shares the spotlight with Chris throughout, but is most memorable in his portrayal of betrayer Judas.

The twin Chakolan sisters, 300 N. Dale, Mount Prospect, do outstanding jobs — Karen in the parable of "seeds sown" and Chris in singing "Day by Day." Jenny Risteen, 120 S. Lancaster, Mount Prospect, figuratively "brought down the house" with her rendition of "Turn Back, O Man."

"By My Side" was a great number with Ann Waters, 219 S. Ill-Lust, and Karen Eulich, 507 S. Ill-Lust, Mount Prospect, singing ever so delicately, harmonizing perfectly.

Two segments of the performance were particularly memorable. First, the sensitive scene when Christ instituted the Lord's Supper. And, best of all, the dramatic crucifixion complete with cross, lights, etc. Following that, as Christ is hoisted and carried out, the song "Prepare Ye" is first tenderly, then explosively, sung with Mark Holm, 102 N. Evanston, Arlington Heights, leading the song.

BACKING THE performers and helping to set the various moods were four instrumentalists who did a superb job. John Battaglia, 402 W. Walnut, Mount Prospect, played drums; Dave Farley, 706 E. Shalence, Mount Prospect, played guitar; Karen Hoeck, 611 W. Berkeley, Arlington Heights, played piano, and Rolfe Miller, 1 E. Sunset, Mount Prospect, played guitar and banjo.

This is the third successive year that an ecumenical group of local high school students existed in this area. In 1971, there was "Tell It Like It Is." Last year, it was "Life." And now, "Godspell." And each time, the kids have organized themselves, had their own student director and were acclaimed. For the first time, this group has had pastoral support in the Rev. Warren Sapp of South Church.

Other adult helpers with Godspell were Kilt Elliott, 312 S. Edward, Bill and Eileen McElligatt, 105 S. George; Nita Pearson, 303 S. Waverly, and David Robery and Jeanette Weber, all of Mount Prospect.

The Godspell performance, however, does not lend itself quite as much to regular Sunday morning worship services as "Tell It" and "Life" did, primarily because of its extreme circus atmosphere. For instance, during an intermission, huge beachballs are "volleyed" around the audience. However, for evening or special church services or for club programs, Godspell is super.

Arrangements for performances can be made through Linda Welles, 816 S. Edward, 250-1370, or Carol Hoffman, 420 N. Maple, 253-8731. Both are Mount Prospect residents.

Godspell will be performed twice next Sunday at Trinity United Methodist Church, 605 W. Golf Rd., at 9:30 a.m. and 8 p.m.

Savings and loan branch construction under way

Construction has begun in Mount Prospect on the first suburban branch of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Chicago.

Ralph Lueders, senior vice president of the institution, said the interim facility being built just south of the Randhurst shopping center should be open by the middle of November.

Construction of a permanent building will begin in late winter, he said, with completion scheduled in mid-1975.

The three-acre site is between Rand Road and Main Street, south of Kensington Road.

The interim savings and loan building will contain 5,000 square feet. The two-story permanent building will include 10,000 square feet for the savings and loan operation and an undetermined amount of space for rental to other offices.

Drawings are being made for the permanent building and engineering studies are being completed.

Lueders said the Mount Prospect branch will become a model for other ventures by First Federal Savings and Loan. Currently, the association maintains only one facility besides its downtown building — a branch at 1750 W. 47th St., Chicago.

The opening of the savings and loan in Mount Prospect will give the village its fifth banking institution.

Others are Countryside Bank, 1190 S. Elmhurst Rd.; First National Bank of Mount Prospect, Randhurst Shopping Center; Mount Prospect State Bank, 15 E. Busse Ave., and Mount Prospect Federal Savings and Loan Association, 15 E. Prospect Ave.

Carl G. Klehm

Klehm is dead at 57

by KURT BAER

Carl G. Klehm, well-known operator of the Charles Klehm & Son Nursery in Arlington Heights, died yesterday of what was described as natural causes.

Klehm, 57, was pronounced dead

on arrival at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village at 10:30 a.m. yesterday. He reportedly died earlier in the morning of an apparent heart attack at his family home near the intersection of Arlington Heights Road and the Northwest Tollway.

Most recently, Klehm had been involved with the proposed development of a $85 million convention center near the Tollway Interchange. However, the Klehm family name has been known in the Northwest Suburbs for 120 years.

CARL KLEHM assumed ownership of the nursery at Algonquin and Arlington Heights roads in 1957 after the death of his father, Charles. Founded in 1856 by John Klehm, a German emigrant, the nursery is known as one of the largest and most successful in the area.

The nursery is particularly famous for its wide variety of peonies. The family also operates nurseries on Rand Road in Lake Zurich and in Rockford.

With the growth of the Northwest suburbs, the business has continued to grow and prosper. Although rumored to be a millionaire, Klehm worked actively in the nurturing and selling of his nursery stock.

He donated plantings for several park sites in Arlington Heights and provided $9,000 worth of free landscaping for the Arlington Heights Memorial Library.

KLEHM HAD recently negotiated a lease with the prospective developers of the Chicago-O'Hare International Trade Center for the use of 65 of the family's 110-acre home site near the southeast corner of the Tollway-Arlington Heights Road interchange.

Klehm's attorney said yesterday that the death would not affect that contractual arrangement or the family's plan to maintain its home on the northern 53 acres of the site.

Gas lines no hindrance to driver test station

A previously undetected gas line on property in Barrington Hills will not prevent the state from purchasing the 40-acre site for a Northwest suburban driver testing station.

Norbert Johnson, head of physical services with Sec. of State Michael J. Howlett, said yesterday that his earlier fears of the site's safety have been allayed.

"I've had a meeting with the National Gas Pipeline Corporation of America. There's no problem," Johnson said. The corporation will pay for upgrading the line and moving it if necessary, according to Johnson.

LESS THAN two weeks ago, Johnson told The Herald that he had received an extension on the state's option to buy the property when state engineers discovered the gas line.

Now, Johnson says all that remains before the state's option to buy the property when state engineers discovered the gas line.

Now, Johnson says all that remains before the state closes the deal to buy the site is to "get a few little technicalities straightened out."

Those details include talks with Howlett and an architect. Although Johnson has not formalized a building design for the station, he promised, "It's going to be acceptable to the community."

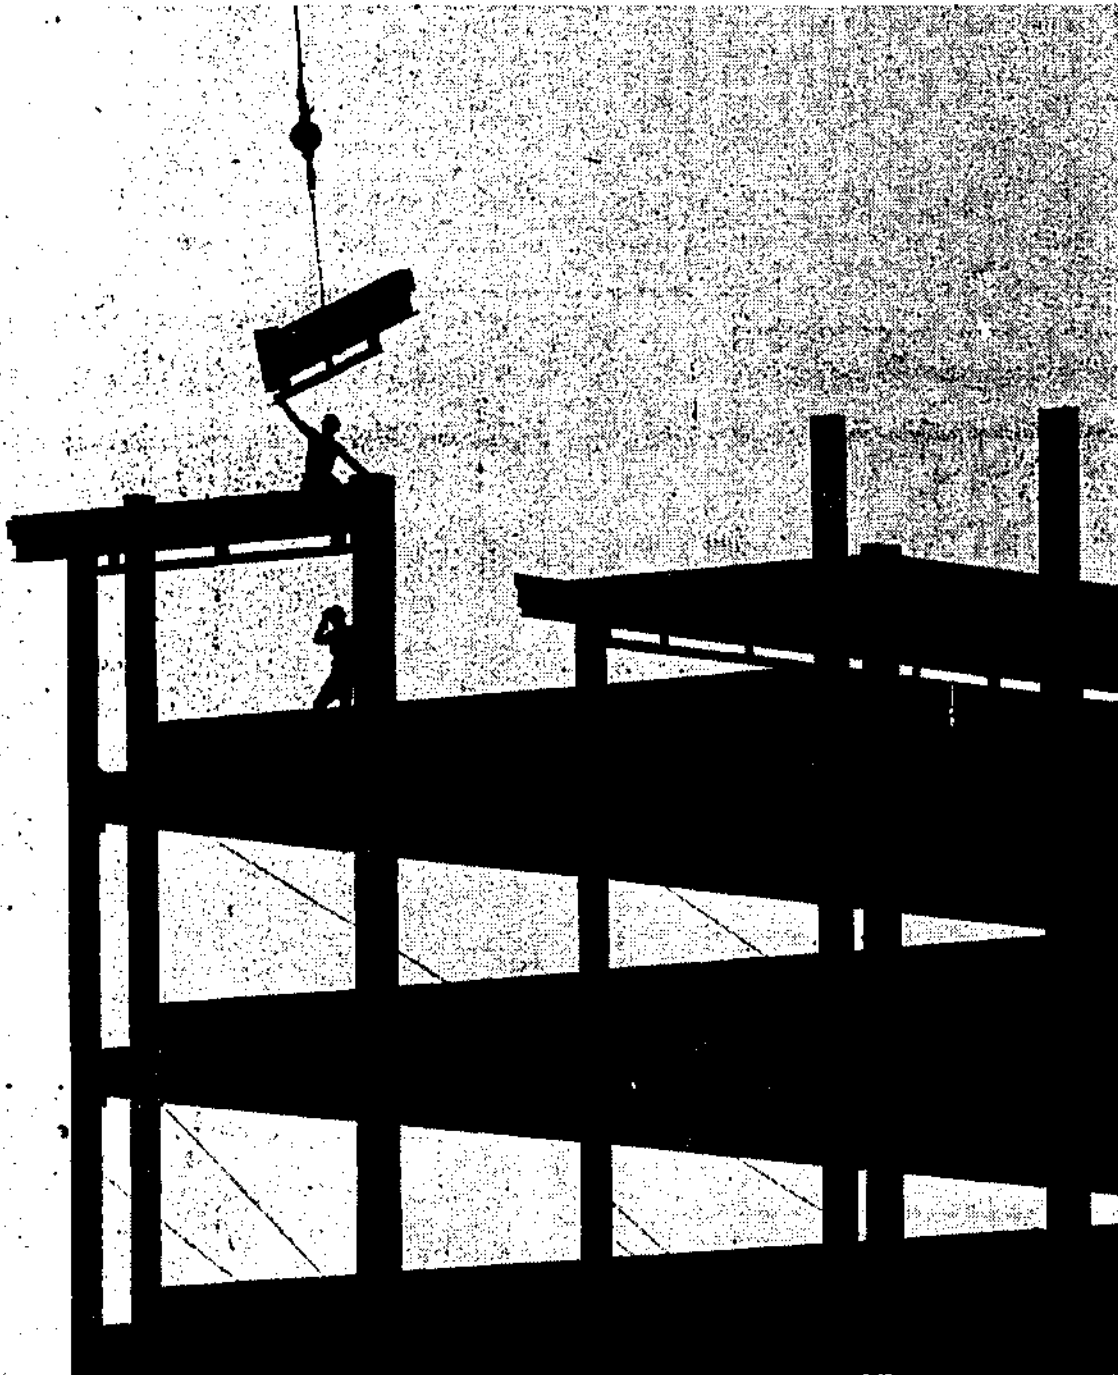

The physical services head met with area village attorneys shortly after the state took out an option, and he has reportedly agreed to meet with municipal officials after the state purchases the site.

The land has a reported purchase price of $112,000 and is located near Ill. Rte. 59 in southern Barrington Hills.

THE SITE HAD been eliminated from a group of three recommended sites submitted by a local search committee to Howlett, a Democrat, earlier this year. The committee members were selected by Republican Sec. of State John W. Lewis. Committee members claim that the site is too far from sewer and water lines to be economically feasible and has poor access from the Northwest Tollway.

State officials say those problems will be overcome.

The facility will cost an estimated $1.5 million when completed. It will include on-the-road testing lanes for the driving test. Current driver testing stations closest to Northwest suburban residents are in Lombard and Elgin.

Two men perch on the skeleton of a building in construction.

Wheeling Township not implicated in BGA kickback probe

A headline across front pages of Monday's editions of the Herald erroneously implied that Wheeling Township and Wheeling Township Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen were implicated in an investigation of kickbacks to government officials in various Illinois communities.

No charges or implications of impropriety concerning kickbacks were leveled at Olsen or other Wheeling Township officials or employees.

The Better Government Association investigation that prompted the public charges contends that township officials in numerous Illinois counties have been receiving kickbacks for buying supplies from certain chemical companies.

The BGA did not implicate Olsen in this scheme, but said his office apparently had paid overblown prices for small amounts of penetrating oil. The Herald's story yesterday correctly reported the BGA's findings, but the headline on the story gave an opposite, and incorrect, impression.

Under provisions for township government in Illinois, offices such as those of the highway commissioner are separate authorities and not under the supervision of other township officers such as township supervisor, auditor or treasurer.

The Herald regrets the erroneous impression.

Stronger effort in paper recycling urged at hearing

Several residents and representatives of recycling agencies last night appeared at a public hearing by the Environmental Control Commission to offer suggestions that would bolster the recycling effort in Arlington Heights.

More than 30 persons, mostly from civic organizations, attended the hearing conducted by commission member Marilyn Macko, and the general meeting that followed afterwards.

Thela Idyl Nipper, a member of the environmental committee of Wheeling Township, suggested the village conduct a paper pick-up once a week. The pick-up would either be performed by village trucks or by contracting an outside company, she said. "Recycling paper has become successful in Madison (Wis.)," said Miss Nipper. "The pick-up has paid its own way in other towns and it could here, too."

THE DEMANDS FOR recycling paper are growing strong, according to George Baer of the Baer Paper Recycling Co., Maywood. The company currently handles the village's recycling paper. Recycled paper may be a permanent new market because federal restrictions forbidding the cutting down of trees for paper products, he said. He added that this only applies to federally owned forests.

Baer said his company will take mixed paper including the color comic sections of newspapers, magazines, catalogs, magazines and junk mail, as well as newspaper. This was explained at the meeting to clarify the recent confusion residents had on whether the company accepted mixed paper.

"But the prices will change month to month on how much we pay," said Baer. Last month the village was paid $10 per ton for its paper. This month the price skyrocketed to $15 per ton. "We're always dealing with supply and demand," said Baer, adding that the company will pay more when more paper is demanded.

To promote glass recycling, Don Kinney of the Coca Cola Co. in the Chicago area, said the company provides signs that could be in stores and other buildings. "We print the posters and it's up to the groups to distribute them," said Kinney. The posters are free of charge.

The company also offers film strips and ecology games for young school children in order to provide public education. "The ecology games are of the cause and effect type — if something is done, this happens," said Kinney who also works with glass companies in gathering other bottles bearing other brand names.

THE GAMES, particularly suited for children 10 years old or younger, are available through the soft drink company.

The Environmental Control Commission is considering the possibility of reinstituting the recycling of metal cans, and will conduct an investigation in the near future. Previous problems of recycling cans and other metal and tin products amounted to total disbanding of the project because it was unprofitable.

Members of the commission also talked of a third recycling center for the village or the relocation of the second center. Currently the members are speculating on a site near the south end of Recreation Park, which might be suitable because of its central location in the village.

Students here 'really concerned' about Nixon crisis

by JILL BETTNER

History is far from a dead subject in schools right now as students watch and discuss current events in the Nixon administration that are putting the American system of government to the test.

Presidential power, the mechanics of impeachment and the mandates of the U.S. Constitution are among topics being discussed in area schools in the wake of the series of top governmental shakeups.

Teachers say most students, particularly those in junior high and high school, appear to be fairly well informed on current political events, but unsure of their ramifications.

Instructors are replacing history textbooks with newspapers in discussing American government.

"This has been a great asset to social studies teachers," Norm Repplinger, division head for social science at Wheeling High School said yesterday. "Many times what we teach is too dry for students to be interested in, but they're really concerned about this."

THE IMPEACHMENT of Andrew Johnson and Thomas Jefferson's standoff with the U.S. Supreme Court have become popular topics of discussion as teachers attempt to put President Nixon's actions into perspective for students.

A special half-day schedule is planned tomorrow at Forest View High School to give teachers time to talk about the issues. At other schools, teachers are seizing on student interest to discuss politics.

"I'm kind of impressed with how much the kids know," said Paul Jordan, head of the social science and foreign language department at Buffalo Grove High School. "They seem to be much more interested in what's happening than kids were a few years back."

AT HERSEY High School in Arlington Heights, the issues are being discussed "up and down the halls," said Al Schmidt, social studies department chairman.

Student reactions are mixed to the latest governmental crisis this past week-end when President Nixon fired special prosecutor Archibald Cox and subsequently dismissed Deputy Atty. General William French Smith.

Most instructors feel the teenagers' opinions on the firings probably mirror those of their parents. This is especially true on the question of whether or not Nixon should be impeached for his refusal to turn over the White House tapes that may be relevant to the Watergate investigation.

AT SEVERAL area high schools, teachers report there is very little support for the President. Polls of student opinion conducted in classes ranged from a 50-50 split on the impeachment issue to the majority of those asked favoring the action.

Dan Fox, an instructor at Conant High School in Hoffman Estates said the events of last weekend caused a marked change in opinion on the impeachment question.

A few weeks ago, Fox said, only four or five of his students out of a class of about 30 favored impeachment of Nixon. Yesterday, 19 said they feel he should be ousted.

A change in student attitude was also apparent at Rolling Meadows High School.

Commenting on his interpretation of the feelings of his classmates there, senior Tom Sulla said he has seen more reaction to the firing of Cox than on any previous political issue discussed at school.

"More people were outwardly upset than they were before," Sulla said. "There's a feeling of disillusionment with the government now. I think there's more alienation than before."

CYNICISM WITH American politics in general is apparently spreading among many students.

Palatine High School social science department chairman, Larry Peterson, said some of his students are beginning to tune out when the subject comes up.

"Students who favor impeachment are very vocal about it and the others are very quiet," he said. "It's almost like they're pouting. They are angry it's being discussed and they're tired of hearing about it."

No only cynicism but real fear is evident in some students that the American form of government is no longer workable.

JOHN BARBINI, a teacher at Eisenhower Junior High School in Schaumburg, said students "are shaken, they show disbelief and they are questioning the whole system."

Whatever the outcome of present events, both students and teachers agree that it is exciting, if not awesome, to be watching history in the making.

As one boy at Lively Junior High School in Elk Grove put it: "Boy, is this the year for social studies."

5 officials of Des Plaines firm indicted for mail fraud

by STEVE BROWN

Five officials of a Des Plaines inventors' assistance company were indicted yesterday on federal mail-fraud charges for their part in an alleged scheme bilking inventors out of more than $1 million since 1971.

U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson announced indictments yesterday, charging the five officials of Imperial Inventors International Inc. of 2250 E. Devon Ave., Des Plaines, with 15 counts of mail fraud each.

Terminating the company's business practices a "ripoff," Thompson said the firm falsely told inventors their products had a 50-50 chance of being successfully marketed. He said about 3,000 inventors throughout the country have fallen victim to the scheme.

THOMPSON CREDITED The Herald and several other news organizations with providing information that led to the criminal charges.

The indictment names Thomas M. Roth, national coordinator; Clair C. Wagner, national codirector; Jack Brumler, training manager; Donald Lewis, and Donald McAllister as the perpetrators of the swindle. Brumler resides at 1300 Pima Ln., Mount Prospect. Roth and Wagner gave the Devon Avenue address. Lewis resides in Rockford and McAllister lives in Hillside.

McAllister also is president of Washington Patent Assistance Inc., an Imperial subsidiary, which was part of the total scheme, Thompson said.

Imperial officials were not available for comment yesterday. If convicted the men face a maximum sentence of 75 years in prison and a $15,000 fine each.

IN A HERALD investigative series published in January, a number of questionable business practices used by Imperial were disclosed.

The federal indictment marks the second major action against the company in the last six weeks. The Illinois Attorney General's Consumer Fraud Division charged the company with violating the state consumer fraud act and deceptive trade practice.

The indictments charge company officials falsely contended Imperial was in a position to develop and market inventions successfully because of its facilities and the training and expertise of its staff.

The company officials also are accused of lying to customers by telling them they were being charged reduced fees because their inventions had merit and by contending Imperial made no profit on its evaluation fees.

The company also falsely claimed to have special license agreements with manufacturers and lied to prospective customers by saying it had a "50-50" rate of success in marketing inventions, federal officials charged.

THE HERALD SERIES disclosed that the training program for new product evaluators amounted to nothing more than a week-long course in learning a sales pitch.

Inventors were asked to pay a fee, usually $125, for the evaluations. After the product received a positive evaluation, (more than 90 per cent of all products were given a chance of success). Imperial tried to get inventors to pay between $1,200 and $1,600 for additional services.

Thompson said the company also steered inventors to Washington Patent Assistance, urging them to seek a patent for their ideas. The company charged nearly $600 for this service.

DESPITE IMPERIAL'S contentions, investigators said the company has never successfully marketed an invention.

The indictment also notes Imperial falsely told clients that manufacturers had demonstrated an interest in their products, and that their inventions would be exhibited at a trade show. The indictment stated inventors were given "newsletters containing self-laudatory statements about Imperial."

The Herald disclosed that the company newsletter contended that Imperial successfully marketed several products. However persons who developed the products said Imperial had not performed satisfactorily and they were disappointed with the company.

The newsletter also touted the appointment of Vincent Borsattino as the firm's general counsel. The Herald revealed that Borsattino had never received a law degree nor had he been admitted to the bar to practice law.

Besides Imperial and the patent assistance firm, the indictment charges the company used Imperial Youth Achievement Association, Consolidated Surety, Crown Engineering, Imperial Distributors, Equitable Collection Agency, Craig Marshall and Associates Inc., Pic Enterprises and R and W Enterprises in the swindle. These companies are subsidiaries of Imperial.

THE INDICTMENT names another Imperial official Robert C. Pond as an unindicted co-conspirator. Pond was accused of taking part in the scheme, but will become a prosecution witness, according to federal authorities.

In addition to the federal criminal charges and the Illinois suit, the company also is under investigation in Indiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

now pending before the Arlington Heights village board.

Arlington Heights Village Pres. Jack Walsh, who said he knew Klehm as a personal friend for more than 10 years, described him as being "foremost among the people we in the village will miss."

"IF THERE IS a single person in my life who symbolizes this area, it is Carl Klehm," Walsh said, "because of his personality, his generosity and as an individual."

Arlington Heights Park District Pres. Charles Cronin called Klehm "a great friend of the park district."

Klehm was a member of numerous professional associations, a director and chairman of the board of the Tollway-Arlington National Bank, a member of the Cook County Farm Bureau, the Arlington Heights Lions Club and Chamber of Commerce.

Klehm is survived by his wife, Lois; three sons, Carl II, Arnold J. and Roy; a daughter, Kathleen; four grandchildren and five sisters.

Visitation is today from 7-9:30 p.m. at Lauterburg and Oehler Funeral Home, 2000 E. Northwest Hwy., and tomorrow from 2-5 p.m. and 7-9:30 p.m.

Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at St. Peter Lutheran Church, 111 W. Olive St., and burial will take place in Memory Gardens Cemetery.

LOIS CHURA, a teacher at Olive School, learns to make cornhusk dolls in a special workshop at the school. Participating teachers later will teach their children in time for Halloween and Thanksgiving holidays.

Village United Fund drive passes $20,000 mark

The Arlington Heights United Fund is reported nearly one-third of the way toward meeting this year's $75,000 goal.

With the door-to-door residential campaign virtually complete, the United Fund recently passed the $20,000 mark.

The commercial and industrial, professional and educational fund-raising campaigns are still being organized, according to United Fund publicity director Grady McAuley.

"We're about on target compared to the timetable of last year," McAuley said. He urged residents who have not yet contributed to either mail in their pledge to P.O. Box 363, Arlington Heights, or use the new bank authorization form.

BANK AUTHORIZATION will permit any of four participating banks to send in a United Fund contribution every month in any specified dollar amount. The contribution will be recorded each month on the donor's regular checking account statement.

The bank authorization form is unique to Arlington Heights' United Fund this year, McAuley said, and was designed as a "very convenient and painless way to make a donation."

Participating in the program are the Bank and Trust Co. of Arlington Heights, Northwest Trust and Savings, First Arlington National Bank and the Tollway-Arlington National Bank.

ALMOST ALL of the money raised so far has been from the residential cam-

Mr. Average: Nixon hiding something

President Nixon must have "something to hide" in the Watergate tapes he has refused to release, but the President should not be impeached, according to Mr. Average American, Richard Johnson.

Johnson, the Rolling Meadows man selected last year by computers as representative of the average American, said yesterday Mr. Nixon's firing of special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox and Deputy Atty. Gen. William Ruckelshaus and the resignation of Atty. Gen. Elliot Richardson during the weekend indicate the tapes must reveal information the President cannot afford to have made public.

MR. NIXON ordered Cox fired rather than abide by a court order to relinquish the tape recordings of White House conversations bearing on the Watergate matter to the special prosecutor. Richardson resigned because of the firing and Ruckelshaus was dismissed when he refused to fire Cox.

"To me it seems that there really must be something in those tapes that he (the President) wants to hide," Johnson said. "First he appoints someone to do a job and then when he gets close to something, he's fired."

"But I hope for his sake he is not impeached," Johnson added. "I wouldn't want to see any president impeached. That's a very drastic action and I hope for his sake it doesn't come to that."

Johnson's opinions on national, and particularly presidential affairs, have become public interest ever since he was selected as the subject of two television documentaries by the National Public Affairs Center for Television in Washington, one dealing with the pressures of in-

Flood-control plan heard

The Arlington Heights Park District last night heard a fourth proposal for a flood-control facility at Pioneer Park. The latest proposal came from Stanley Consultants, an engineering firm hired by the village to review the Peterson Engineering Co. report to control flooding in Arlington Heights.

The Stanley plan calls for a three-acre lagoon along the western side of the park. The Peterson report suggested either a dry-bottom flood basin or an underground holding facility on the site. Novak Carlson Engineering, another consulting firm, had presented plans for a landscaped dry-bottom flood basin.

Kenneth Jacobson, representing Stanley, said his company "hated" using park land for a flood basin, but it presented "cost-wise . . . the best election."

HE SAID THE PLANS would improve the park as a community-wide attraction. Tentative plans suggest stocking the lagoon for fishing in the summer, and provisions for ice skating and hockey in the winter.

The lagoon would have a sloping bottom with a depth ranging from four to eight feet. It would have sloping banks to cover six acres to accommodate water from a 25-year flood.

Jacobson said he had no cost estimate for the project because the entire Peterson report has to be studied. He did not give a target date when an estimate could be ready.

Park District Atty. Charles Bobinette said, "How can a park board that's short of money approve a project when we don't know the cost factor involved?"

Jacobson agreed to meet again with the board to answer questions after they had more time to study the proposal in detail.

Maryville makes 'Yule wish list'

Maryville Academy in Des Plaines has been included in the 1973 edition of the "Christmas Wish List," published by Catholic Charities of Chicago.

The booklet contains detailed information on the needs of children, elderly shut-ins, families and individuals living in institutions and communities.

"Christmas Wish List" is available at no cost to individuals, adult and student groups, organizations, businesses and others who are seeking ways to help the needy. It was compiled from a recent survey made by Catholic Charities.

The needs listed for Maryville, a home for dependent children located at 1150 N. River Rd., clothing for boys and girls sizes six through adult (new clothing preferred), and toys for boys and girls from 5 to 12 years of age (new toys preferred).

Other gifts needed include sporting equipment such as basketballs, volleyballs, football equipment, camping equipment, gym shoes, hockey sticks, ice skates, roller skates, etc. Joan Mitchell or Grace Maragella, 824-6126, should be contacted for details.

Another Northwest suburban institution, St. Joseph Home for the Elderly of Palatine, is also included on the "Wish List." The home, located at 80 W. Baldwin Rd., has asked for personal drinking cups. Mrs. Sherri Hammer, 358-5700, should be contacted for details.

Copies of the "Wish List" are available from the Public Relations Office of Catholic Charities of Chicago, 126 North Des Plaines St., Chicago, 60606, or call CE 6-5172, ext. 329.

"HERE IS a situation where a top man gets something started toward uncovering this matter and then he is fired. He (Mr. Nixon) must feel he has some special powers in being the president that he can do this."

"It (the Watergate affair) just keeps getting bigger and bigger," Johnson said. "All I can say is Tricky Dick must be pretty sure he is not going to be impeached or else maybe he's so far gone, to use an expression, that he doesn't care anymore. It's a big mess."

And while he may not go along with a call for impeachment, Mr. Average American added, "I won't be satisfied with Watergate until something concrete is resolved on those tapes."

Jaycee of the Month

Ken Rateike, 307 S. Patton, Arlington Heights, has been named Jaycee of the Month for October.

Rateike was selected for his work as chairman of the Jaycee social committee. He has also served on sand and charcoal project, picnic and has served as treasurer.

A native of Arlington Heights, Rateike has been a member of the Arlington Heights chapter since 1965.

Learning aids on display

Puppets, six-foot rulers, miniature grandfather clocks and mathematical games are some of the learning aids members of the Arlington Heights Junior Women's Club have made.

These items are on display this week at the Arlington Heights Memorial Library, in observance of American Education Week.

Seventeen members of the youth and education committee, headed by Mrs. William Frost, volunteered more than 300 hours in making 150 learning aids which will be presented to the elementary schools in Arlington Heights.

More than 350 teachers will be honored this week by the Junior Women's Club. Each day a small gift will be put in the teacher's mailbox including apples, home-baked goods and decoupage pins that read, "Let's Make Education Top Priority."

Children's art exhibit

An international children's art exhibit is on display in the children's department of the Arlington Heights Memorial Library.

The traveling exhibit, which will remain at the library until Oct. 31, consists of 40 paintings from the UNICEF Information Center on Children's Cultures. More than 20 countries are represented in the collection and children who have contributed their works are from 9 to 15 years old.
